British Expect Change

LABOR LEADERS ADMIT CABINET SHIFT POSSIBLE

Conservative Claims That Bevin To Succeed Attlee Denied

LONDON, Aug. 28 — Laborite informants said today they expected a British cabinet reshuffle in mid-September, but scoffed again at conservative reports that Prime Minister Attlee will be replaced eventually by Foreign Secretary Bevin.

The conservative press bitterly attacked the new "siege economy" measures announced last night by the Attlee government, but the laborites professed to be unruffled.

They declared they will go ahead with their drastic economic planning embracing food, gasoline, and travel cuts and "won't be stampeded into panic measures" because of the dollar shortage.

The laborites said they were sure Attlee could ride out any storm challenging his resignation. This statement came after the opposition press termed the new austerity measures, "inadequate, ineffectual, and dictatorial."

• • •

REPORTS WHICH conservative quarters claimed are factual—but not admitted at Number Ten Downing street—said Attlee will step down in favor of Bevin "at the first favorable opportunity."

These reports received a certain amount of credence in noncabinet labor circles.

A foreign office official said that although Bevin officially heads the British delegation to the United Nations general assembly he cannot state that the foreign secretary will be present when the conference convenes in New York Sept. 15.

The conservative spokesmen claimed that Bevin has told intimate friends that he will make the "speech of my life" before the trades union congress at Southport Wednesday.

• • •

IT IS REGARDED as significant that Bevin is taking an

THIEF WITH YEN FOR MEDICINE BEING SOUGHT

CHICAGO, Aug. 28—A thief with a taste for medicine was sought by Chicago police today.

The hunt was launched when a tractor-trailer with 800 cartons of medicine was reported stolen yesterday from a west side loading dock. it was recovered last night, minus its cargo, in suburban Summit.

The medicine, sent by a Kalamazoo, Mich., concern to a consignee in Kansas City, Mo., was described as "very valuable."

ONE MAN'S OPINION

By Walter Kiernan

Britain has used up its seven billion credit, the Greek government has collapsed with 300 million—any more ideas?

But it's good to know that a father of 10 who ran away with a baby sitter has come back—baby sitters are hard to get.

There was an ad in the paper the other night "baby sitter, has own Cadillac, dollar an hour and can supply own baby if yours is noisy."

But this fellow said he made a mistake—The family was on relief and he apparently found that 12 could live cheaper than two when the 12 are on relief.

Still it shouldn't be held against him—They've only been on relief four years and 16 months and the depression didn't end until 1941.

But as has been said before—it takes all kinds and we've got all kinds.

Winking Eye And Buzzer Bring Sleep

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28—Tired of conventional methods, two inventors have developed gadgets aimed at streamlining the way to slumberland and a new approach to the world-wide problem of insomnia.

Both instruments, on file today at the patent office, could be called modern psychological departures from the sheep-counting, pilltaking recommendations heretofore given weary victims of the ancient malady.

Working on the hypnotic principle, one device resembles a large eye which continually winks emitting a soft light. The other sends the sleeper to dreamland with a low buzz.

It's a little early to ascertain public reception, but, if nothing more, the thingamajigs certainly play on the imagination.

Chester W. Johnson, Bridgewater, Mass., who developed the winking eye, described his invention as being "capable of transmitting light in a bedroom apartment or the like in view of the person desiring to sleep."

He explained that the eye produces "imitation and inducing sleep through the regularity of the winking simulation."

On the other hand, Maury I. Hill, Washington, thinks the best way of falling asleep is his buzz box. He said:

"The continual listening to a sustained monotone of low pitch has a mild hypnotic effect producing mental relaxation or fatigue."

PIPER CUB ROUND-WORLD FLIERS STOP IN EIRE

NEWTOWN, Eire, Aug. 28—Two American pilots flying Piper Cub planes around the world made an unscheduled landing near Newtown today en route from Iceland.

The pilots, Cliff Evans, 27, Washington, D. C., and George Truman, 39, Los Angeles, were scheduled to land at Prestwick, Scotland, but heavy mists forced them to alter their course.

Economists Blame Food, Clothing, Building For Jump In Living Costs

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28—Government economists reported today that increased prices of building materials, clothing and food have accounted largely for a sharp jump in living costs during the last year.

Bureau of agricultural economics experts said that residents in rural areas now are paying one-sixth more for clothing, one-fifth more for food, and 45 percent more for building materials than they did in July, 1946.

The government economists said that these increased costs contributed somewhat to higher prices for food and other products turned out by the nation's six million farmers.

• • •

THEY ALSO explained that the higher prices being paid by farmers for essential items are a good indication of the increased cost of living in cities and other urban communities.

The bureau of labor statistics latest price index shows that food prices in large cities went up nearly 31 percent and clothing prices climbed 18 percent between June, 1946, and June, 1947.

Rents, the only item in the cost of living still under government control, have gone up only one-half percent in the large cities since July of last year.

• • •

BLS AND BAE reports indicated that generally the cost of living in cities has increased more than in rural areas during the last twelve months.

The latest reports compiled by government agencies revealed that living costs were still rising slowly in cities, but showed signs of leveling off in rural regions.

Farm living costs were virtually unchanged from June 15 to July 15. Food prices were up during the month, but building material costs declined slightly and clothing prices generally were steady.

On the other hand, the BLS reported that between May 15 and June 15 food prices in large cities climbed seven-tenths of one percent, and clothing prices rose about four-tenths of one percent.

BRITISH PLAN MODERN JET RAF

England Expects To Complete Changeover To Fast Planes By 1951

LONDON, Aug. 28 — Great Britain expects to have the world's most modern air force within five years.

Ignoring all conventional present-day designs, the royal air force has set a tentative target date of 1951 for complete conversion to jet-propelled aircraft.

The British program is believed to be the most comprehensive and revolutionary undertaken so far by any of the major powers. The United States is still planning on some standard bombing development during the next few years, although the trend is of course toward jet perfection.

At the present time, the British are striving to ready for action what is probably the world's most formidable bomber.

The craft will be jet-propelled, fly at sub-sonic speeds or better and will have an operating radius of 1,500 miles.

Details of the power-packing airplane are secret, but it is known that the design embraces sweeping changes in fuselage and wings as well as important new combat features.

Meanwhile, two British jet fighters already have been combat tested. Most successful is the high-speed Meteor fighter, which looks not unlike an American

BUD WADLINGTON LOSES FINGERS IN HAY BALER

George "Bud" Wadlington, Saltcreek township, suffered a severely mangled right hand Wednesday afternoon when he became entangled in a chain on a hay baler.

Emergency treatment was given by Dr. J. M. Hedges who said the injury was of the crushing type. After treatment Wadlington was taken to White Cross hospital where the middle and ring fingers were amputated at the first knuckle. The index finger was repaired and saved. Dr. Hedges said the boy would get along nicely.

Young Wadlington had just returned from a two weeks training course at the American Youth Foundation camp at Camp Miniwanca, Michigan, as Ohio representative of 4-H club boys.

A member of the Saltcreek Valley Livestock 4-H club, Wadlington plans to study agriculture at Ohio State University this Fall.

ITALIANS TOLD CHICAGO WAS NOT DESTROYED

CHICAGO, Aug. 28—A letter was on its way today to La Spezia, Italy, assuring relatives of Mario Marchese that flames have not destroyed Chicago again.

The La Spezia Marcheses were so alarmed about Mario's safety that they showered him with letters and cables which read:

"Did you all escape? Is everybody safe? Please let us know right away."

Mario was mystified by their anxiety until he received a letter from La Spezia which contained clippings from a La Spezia newspaper dated Aug. 10. Headlines asserted:

"Catastrophe of 1871 repeated! Chicago in flames after earthquake! Terrific shocks are devastating the Middle West! People in panic! Streets open up, swallowing frenzied mob!"

Detroit and Cleveland also were depicted as hard hit.

Mario checked Chicago conditions around that date and discovered a slight earthquake occurred in Illinois Aug. 9. No damage occurred.

Four Pickaway Children Being Treated For Polio

Teddy Davis, 12, son of Mrs. Thelma Davis, Hayward avenue, has been definitely diagnosed as having infantile paralysis, according to word received by the city health department from the state health department.

His illness makes the third case of polio in Circleville and the fourth in Pickaway county this year.

Dr. N. B. Griner sent young Davis to Children's hospital Columbus, Saturday, and earlier in the week it was reported that he was not a victim of the disease. Further diagnosis by the hospital showed that he did have a mild case of infantile paralysis. An uncle of the boy said Thursday morning that he was showing considerable improvement.

• • •

HIS MOTHER, Mrs. Thelma Davis, is the widow of Gene Davis and has five other children: Edgar, 16, Donald, 11, Thomas, 8, Willis, 7, and Terry, 5.

Sandra Sue Fouch, nine-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David W. Fouch, 212 Town street; and William Geary Shirey, 2, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Shirey, 130 West Water street are the two other victims in Circleville. Edward Massey, 4, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Massey, Route 1, Williamsport, is the county's fourth victim.

The Fouch baby was sent to Children's hospital Tuesday by Dr. Lloyd Jones. She has one brother David Jr., 3. Relatives said that her condition seemed to be serious.

• • •

ALL FOUR children are receiving treatment at Children's hospital, Columbus. The hospital said Thursday morning that all were in "good" condition.

Circleville has had no polio victims for several years, and before this year's four victims only one case had been recorded in the county in two years.

NEW COOL AIR MASS COMING

Forecasters Predict More Comfortable Weather Following Showers

Another wave of cooler air from the Northwest was reported heading toward Circleville Thursday, just in time to clamp a lid on the climbing mercury and stop the threat of a second August heat wave.

The mercury was rising here Thursday morning after dipping to a low of 64 during the night—coolest mark in weeks. Wednesday's high was 87.

Weather forecasters saw more high temperatures Thursday afternoon with a break to lower marks Thursday night and Friday.

• • •

FORECASTERS said that showers, beginning tonight in the northern part of the state, would precede the influx of cooler air and that by Friday temperatures again would be back in the pleasant and comfortable lower 80's.

Weathermen said that the cooler air from Canada already had halted another heat wave threat west of Ohio. This morning temperatures were in

CHICAGO WOMAN ADMITS KILLING OF HER HUSBAND

CHICAGO, Aug. 28—Police today announced that Mrs. Anna Sosnowski, 57-year-old housewife, admitted that she killed her husband, Anthony, with a hammer and dismembered the body.

Parts of the body, which had been dismembered with an expertness that indicated a buzz-saw had been used in the grisly crime, were found on the banks of the upper branch of the Chicago river.

Homicide squad detectives said Mrs. Sosnowski confessed the Macabre killing shortly after she was arrested this morning. Fingerprints established the victim's identity.

Lieut. Leroy Steffens of the homicide detail said he believed the woman may be shielding some accomplice in the murder of her 57-year-old husband because of the skill with which Sosnowski's body was dismembered.

HOLIDAY TRAFFIC TOLL EXPECTED TO TOTAL 250

CHICAGO, Aug. 28—Two hundred fifty persons will die in traffic accidents during the three-day Labor Day weekend.

That toll was the prediction of the National Safety Council in Chicago today.

The council said the estimate applied only to immediate traffic deaths and did not include persons who would succumb later from holiday injuries.

With good weather, an estimated 30,000,000 cars will be on the road during the weekend.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 28 — Honesty paid off today at the Ohio state fair.

"I told an untruth about my age. I am 12 instead of 11. Enclosed is 35 cents."

The letter was signed but officials withheld the youth's name.

They said that if he reported to the Eleventh avenue gate today the youth would get his 35 cents back — that is the difference between child and adult admission fees—and would receive free admission to tomorrow's closing day.

LEGION OPENS CONVENTION IN NEW YORK CITY

GOP Leader Backs Military Training For Youths In Welcome Address

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, New York, Aug. 28—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, addressing the opening session of the 29th convention of the American Legion, vigorously advocated a militarily strong United States to lead the world in "the struggle for peace".

Dewey, a potential Republican candidate for the presidency in 1948, came out for universal military training of America's young men as a "powerful bulwark against war itself."

The governor and Mayor William O'Dwyer of New York City delivered speeches of welcome to the thousands of Legionnaires who packed the floor and galleries of Madison Square Garden in one of the most colorful conventions in the Legion's history.

Long before national commander Paul H. Griffith of Uniontown, Pa., tapped his gavel, calling the convention to order, the delegates streamed into the hall.

As a prelude to the business of the day they were entertained by a band concert rendered by Harwood post 5, of Joliet, Ill.

Then followed the advancement of the colors, after which Morton Downey sang "The Star-Spangled Banner". The invocation was given by the Rev. Arthur L. Rustad, national chaplain.

• • •

DEWEY WAS greeted with a round of applause when he came to the microphone.

He said he was happy to welcome the Legionnaires to New York and hoped they would have a wonderful time.

In serious tones the governor told the delegates the United States is now facing the task of converting our victory in the war into permanent peace.

BEST OFFICER CORPS IN WORLD U. S. ARMY AIM

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28—The Army moved today for the establishment of a thoroughly trained and schooled officer corps superior to that of any other nation.

A career management branch has been set up under the director of personnel and administration on the war department general staff. It is the function of this branch to make certain that officers retained in the army have well-rounded and complete experience throughtout their Army careers.

Although officers will be allowed to develop specialties and will be used in positions to which their natural aptitudes best fit them, the Army hopes to develop officers capable of holding any job their rank indicates, rather than one special position.

Each arm, such as infantry, artillery, engineers, etc., will develop its own officer training program, but they will follow roughly the same pattern.

TOKYO, Aug. 28 — Former Premier Hideki Tojo declared in a statement read today at the Tokyo war crimes trial that Emperor Hirohito issued direct orders for the launching of the Pacific war.

The statement, made by "Pearl Harbor premier" Tojo under preliminary questioning while he was awaiting trial, asserted:

"The orders were issued by the emperor as commander in chief of the army and navy on the advice of the army and navy chiefs of staff."

Tojo, principal defendant of the 25 former Japanese leaders on trial, was quoted further as

CHICAGO WOMAN ADMITS KILLING OF HER HUSBAND

CHICAGO, Aug. 28—Police today announced that Mrs. Anna Sosnowski, 57-year-old housewife, admitted that she killed her husband, Anthony, with a hammer and dismembered the body.

Parts of the body, which had been dismembered with an expertness that indicated a buzz-saw had been used in the grisly crime, were found on the banks of the upper branch of the Chicago river.

Homicide squad detectives said Mrs. Sosnowski confessed the Macabre killing shortly after she was arrested this morning. Fingerprints established the victim's identity.

Lieut. Leroy Steffens of the homicide detail said he believed the woman may be shielding some accomplice in the murder of her 57-year-old husband because of the skill with which Sosnowski's body was dismembered.

HONESTY GAINS FAIR PASS FOR OHIO YOUNGSTER

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 28 — Honesty paid off today at the Ohio state fair.

Fair officials received the following letter postmarked Columbus.

"I told an untruth about my age. I am 12 instead of 11. Enclosed is 35 cents."

The letter was signed but officials withheld the youth's name.

They said that if he reported to the Eleventh avenue gate today the youth would get his 35 cents back — that is the difference between child and adult admission fees—and would receive free admission to tomorrow's closing day.

LEGION OPENS CONVENTION IN NEW YORK CITY

GOP Leader Backs Military Training For Youths In Welcome Address

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, New York, Aug. 28—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, addressing the opening session of the 29th convention of the American Legion, vigorously advocated a militarily strong United States to lead the world in "the struggle for peace".

Dewey, a potential Republican candidate for the presidency in 1948, came out for universal military training of America's young men as a "powerful bulwark against war itself."

The governor and Mayor William O'Dwyer of New York City delivered speeches of welcome to the thousands of Legionnaires who packed the floor and galleries of Madison Square Garden in one of the most colorful conventions in the Legion's history.

Long before national commander Paul H. Griffith of Uniontown, Pa., tapped his gavel, calling the convention to order, the delegates streamed into the hall.

As a prelude to the business of the day they were entertained by a band concert rendered by Harwood post 5, of Joliet, Ill.

Then followed the advancement of the colors, after which Morton Downey sang "The Star-Spangled Banner". The invocation was given by the Rev. Arthur L. Rustad, national chaplain.

• • •

DEWEY WAS greeted with a round of applause when he came to the microphone.

He said he was happy to welcome the Legionnaires to New York and hoped they would have a wonderful time.

In serious tones the governor told the delegates the United States is now facing the task of converting our victory in the war into permanent peace.

BEST OFFICER CORPS IN WORLD U. S. ARMY AIM

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28—The Army moved today for the establishment of a thoroughly trained and schooled officer corps superior to that of any other nation.

A career management branch has been set up under the director of personnel and administration on the war department general staff. It is the function of this branch to make certain that officers retained in the army have well-rounded and complete experience throughtout their Army careers.

Although officers will be allowed to develop specialties and will be used in positions to which their natural aptitudes best fit them, the Army hopes to develop officers capable of holding any job their rank indicates, rather than one special position.

Each arm, such as infantry, artillery, engineers, etc., will develop its own officer training program, but they will follow roughly the same pattern.

General O'Donnell's acceptance, announced today, raised to two five-star generals, two full generals, five lieutenant generals, and seven major generals who have accepted Lt. Gen. Jimmy Doolittle's invitations to attend the conclave.

ILLINOIS YOUTH KILLS WIFE, FATHER, SELF

SHELBYVILLE, Ill., Aug. 28—An apparently crazed 22-year-old man shot and killed himself today after a shooting affray in which he killed his estranged bride and his father and wounded his mother and brother-in-law.

Sheriff C. C. Clawson indentified the gun-wielder as Donald Helton, 22.

The sheriff said Helton took his own life after he went berserk with a .45-caliber automatic in an apparent attempt to wipe out his entire family.

Authorities said Helton entered a skating rink late last night where his estranged wife, Jacqueline, 16, was attending a party. Helton fired two bullets into his wife's chest without warning, and then sent one bullet into the body of her 12-year-old brother, Walter Knearman, when the latter rushed to his sister's side.

Helton left the skating rink, and sped to his family's farm four miles away in his surplus war jeep. He walked into the home of his father, Earl, 60, and shot him fatally. When his 55-year-old mother attempted to shield her husband, Helton shot her in the hand.

Officers found the youth's body, sprawled on the floor of his father's home. He had been shot in the temple. The .45 caliber automatic was at his side.

CROP INSURANCE DEADLINE SET FOR AUGUST 31

Farmers in Pickaway county who have not paid their 1947 Federal Crop Insurance premium on wheat must do so by August 31 or automatically be placed on the county register of indebtedness, Dewey Downs, vice-chairman of the local AAA office said today.

The "grace period" of 60 days ends August 31 for wheat. "Period of grace" on corn and tobacco ends at a later date, Downs said.

Any farmer who is in debt on his insurance premiums will not receive lime or any other services which the committee renders to farmers. The county committee will determine that the farmer making requests for such services is not in debt to the United States (except to Farm and Home Administration) before granting services.

This rule applies not only to 1947 Federal Crop Insurance premiums but to any other indebtedness that is on the register from programs in the past, Downs added.

THE HAGUE, Aug. 28 — The Aneta news agency said today the Dutch cabinet has decided to accept the United Nations' security council offer of its good offices in achieving settlement of the Indonesian dispute.

According to classic myth, Sisyphus, king of Ephyra, for his great wickedness, was condemned to punishment in the infernal regions. OFFICIALS LEAD DRIVE FOR NEW U. S. RESEARCH

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28—President Truman and top government officials today led a drive for an expanded national program of scientific research and development to keep America prosperous and safe.

Mr. Truman and his scientific research board touched off the drive by declaring that the nation's scientific knowledge must be enlarged to provide full employment and full production and "protect our democracy from the dangers it faces in an uneasy world."

Bluntly warning that the United States has failed to keep pace with some foreign nations in scientific research, the board said that a rapid extension of scientific knowledge "may reasonably be said to be a major factor in national survival."

COALITION GREEK CABINET SLATED TO EASE CRISIS

ATHEN, Aug. 28—Official announcement of the impending formation of a broad coalition Greek government under a "neutral" premier brought prospects today of the strongest anti-Communist unity in Greece since the war.

Political observers predicted that Gen. Alexander Papagos, King Paul's chamberlain and commander in chief of Greek forces during the war against Italy, would head the new government.

The London Evening Standard scathingly referred to "this slave state".

The morning newspapers began the barrage against the government's edict reimposing wartime curtailment of food, gasoline and foreign travel.

Sharp editorials assailed Prime Minister Attlee's two-year tenure, with the Daily Express headlining its comment:

"Less-less-less."

The Express pointed out that the edicts announced last night do not amount to much against the great "yawning gap of deficit."

The London Times opened its blast with:

"Never has a ministry fallen so far short of pent-up expectations on so many successive occasions as Attlee's government."

The government's measures, which will go into effect between the present and Oct. 1, slash meat rations, cut the size of restaurant meals, eliminate motorcar driving for pleasure and prohibit holiday travel abroad.

'CAREFUL STUDY' OF FREEDOM OF SPEECH URGED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28—Secretary of Interior Krug, in response to a proposal that Gerald L. K. Smith be denied the use of government public parks for mass meetings, today recommended that "careful study" should be made of freedom of speech.

Rep. Sabath (D) Ill., who urged that Smith be denied the use of federal parks for rallies, disclosed Krug's written reply in which he emphasized the necessity for "permitting the utmost freedom of speech and simultaneously preventing misuse of park facilities."

having told allied interrogators that the emperor's orders were to attack Pearl Harbor, Singapore, the Philippines and Hong Kong.

* * *

ACCORDING to Tojo's statement, the orders were issued following an imperial conference at the emperor's palace in Tokyo Dec. 1, 1941, six days before Japanses forces attacked American and British outpost in the Pacific.

Tojo was quoted as stating that "the national will for war was decided for the first time" at that conference.

Prior to that conference, the Tojo statement added, no orders had been issued for war against the United States and Britain.

* * *

THE TRANSCRIPT of Tojo's jail cell interrogation was introduced in evidence as the defense developed what it called the "army division" of the Pacific war phase of its case.

The move apparently was designed to support the defense contention that Tojo, a general of the army at the time he served as premier, was merely carrying out the orders of his superiors in starting the Pacific conflict.

TANKS, ARMORED CARS USED IN INDIA RIOTING

NEW DELHI, Aug. 28—The Punjab boundary force went into action with tanks and armored cars today in the Ludhiana area to end the weeks-long slaughter by well armed mobs of Moslems and Sikhs.

(The London Daily Express reported from Ludhiana that 100,000 Sikhs, aided by the city's police force, are battling a half million Moslems in the biggest single Indian communal action of recent years.)

Reports from Ludhiana, 190 miles north of New Delhi, said frenzied mobs are in control of the city and large residential and business sections are ablaze.

New raids on trains and the murder of passengers were reported from the countryside.

BRITISH PLAN MODERN JET RAF

P-38 Lightning without standard engines.

Another top-flight jet is the Vampire, an incredibly small yet highly maneuverable weapon. It is understood that the RAF envisions the larger Meteor as a long-range offense weapon while the Vampire will be primarily for home defense.

Production of the Lincoln Bomber, successor to Britain's big battle-of-Europe Lancaster, has been all but halted as the RAF prepares to swing into an entirely new concept of air warfare.

RAF officers expect that the new long-range jet craft, or a prototype extremely similar to it, will be able to exercise effective air control over Europe at speeds never before envisioned.

Ironically enough, Britain's severely curtailed military budgets forced overnight adoption of the jet principle.

Unlike the United States, which has funds to provide for an interim air force of conventional bombers until thorough jet research and design has been completed, the royal air force was faced with abrupt conversion or indefinite delay.

With full government support, they chose immediate conversion and decided to count on obsolescent bombers of World War II to tide them over in the interim phase.

To implement the program, the British government allocated more than two-thirds of all research and development funds to the royal air force and budgeted England's air arm at nearly 75 million dollars more annually than the royal navy.

INTER - AMERICAN TREATY DETAILS BEING FINISHED

PETROPOLIS, Aug. 28 — The inter-American defense committees smoothed out last details today of the hemispheric treaty, and a full session is expected to approve it tomorrow.

The text then will be sent to the printers prior to the formal signing by next Tuesday, when President Truman addresses the closing conference.

The treaty will bear the signatures of representatives of 19 countries. Ecuador's delegate is barred because the revolutionary government installed in his homeland has not been recognized by the other governments.

But the way apparently will be left open for both Ecuador and Nicaragua to sign at a future date. The same is true of Canada.

It is understood Canada has been approached through her ministers in Rio De Janeiro, but declined an invitation to sign in the near future.

THE HAGUE, Aug. 28 — The Aneta news agency said today the Dutch cabinet has decided to accept the United Nations' security council offer of its good offices in achieving settlement of the Indonesian dispute.

According to classic myth, Sisyphus, king of Ephyra, for his great wickedness, was condemned to punishment in the infernal regions. He was given the task of rolling a huge stone from the bottom to the top of a hill. On reaching the summit the stone immediately rolled down again and Sisyphus had to begin his work anew.

OFFICIALS LEAD DRIVE FOR NEW U. S. RESEARCH

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28—President Truman and top government officials today led a drive for an expanded national program of scientific research and development to keep America prosperous and safe.

Mr. Truman and his scientific research board touched off the drive by declaring that the nation's scientific knowledge must be enlarged to provide full employment and full production and "protect our democracy from the dangers it faces in an uneasy world."

Bluntly warning that the United States has failed to keep pace with some foreign nations in scientific research, the board said that a rapid extension of scientific knowledge "may reasonably be said to be a major factor in national survival."

COALITION GREEK CABINET SLATED TO EASE CRISIS

ATHEN, Aug. 28—Official announcement of the impending formation of a broad coalition Greek government under a "neutral" premier brought prospects today of the strongest anti-Communist unity in Greece since the war.

Political observers predicted that Gen. Alexander Papagos, King Paul's chamberlain and commander in chief of Greek forces during the war against Italy, would head the new government.

BRIEF CASE CONTAINING ATOMIC FACTS RECOVERED

DAYTON, O., Aug. 28—A brief case containing non-secret atomic energy material which was stolen from a Boston man, was reported recovered by Dayton police today.

William E. Barbour, Jr., reported the brief case stolen before he left for his Boston home. It was found in the basement of the Biltmore hotel.

TRUCK, AUTO COLLIDE

A truck driven by Austin Mahaffey, Chillicothe, collided with a car driven by Charles Hoy, Tarlton, at the intersection of Mound and Mingo streets Thursday morning. The truck was pulling away from the curb on Mound street and ran into the side of Hoy's car. Hoy was going west. The left rear side of the car was damaged.

LABOR LEADERS ADMIT CABINET SHIFT POSSIBLE

increasing part in domestic affairs. He is terminating his vacation tomorrow to return to London. This is being done ostensibly to be in readiness for another cabinet emergency session next week.

The British evening papers took up the fierce denunciation of the labor government.

The London Evening Standard scathingly referred to "this slave state".

The morning newspapers began the barrage against the government's edict reimposing wartime curtailment of food, gasoline and foreign travel.

Sharp editorials assailed Prime Minister Attlee's two-year tenure, with the Daily Express headlining its comment:

"Less-less-less."

The Express pointed out that the edicts announced last night do not amount to much against the great "yawning gap of deficit."

The London Times opened its blast with:

"Never has a ministry fallen so far short of pent-up expectations on so many successive occasions as Attlee's government."

The government's measures, which will go into effect between the present and Oct. 1, slash meat rations, cut the size of restaurant meals, eliminate motorcar driving for pleasure and prohibit holiday travel abroad.

'CAREFUL STUDY' OF FREEDOM OF SPEECH URGED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28—Secretary of Interior Krug, in response to a proposal that Gerald L. K. Smith be denied the use of government public parks for mass meetings, today recommended that "careful study" should be made of freedom of speech.

Rep. Sabath (D) Ill., who urged that Smith be denied the use of federal parks for rallies, disclosed Krug's written reply in which he emphasized the necessity for "permitting the utmost freedom of speech and simultaneously preventing misuse of park facilities."

TOJO ACCUSES JAP EMPEROR

having told allied interrogators that the emperor's orders were to attack Pearl Harbor, Singapore, the Philippines and Hong Kong.

• • •

ACCORDING to Tojo's statement, the orders were issued following an imperial conference at the emperor's palace in Tokyo Dec. 1, 1941, six days before Japanses forces attacked American and British outpost in the Pacific.

Tojo was quoted as stating that "the national will for war was decided for the first time" at that conference.

Prior to that conference, the Tojo statement added, no orders had been issued for war against the United States and Britain.

• • •

THE TRANSCRIPT of Tojo's jail cell interrogation was introduced in evidence as the defense developed what it called the "army division" of the Pacific war phase of its case.

The move apparently was designed to support the defense contention that Tojo, a general of the army at the time he served as premier, was merely carrying out the orders of his superiors in starting the Pacific conflict.

TANKS, ARMORED CARS USED IN INDIA RIOTING

NEW DELHI, Aug. 28—The Punjab boundary force went into action with tanks and armored cars today in the Ludhiana area to end the weeks-long slaughter by well armed mobs of Moslems and Sikhs.

(The London Daily Express reported from Ludhiana that 100,000 Sikhs, aided by the city's police force, are battling a half million Moslems in the biggest single Indian communal action of recent years.)

Reports from Ludhiana, 190 miles north of New Delhi, said frenzied mobs are in control of the city and large residential and business sections are ablaze.

New raids on trains and the murder of passengers were reported from the countryside.

BALBOA, C. Z. Aug. 28—Lieut. Gen. Willis D. Crittenberger, commanding general of American bases in the Panama Canal Zone, announced today the abandonment of 14 defense sites because of military budget slashes.

BRITISH PLAN MODERN JET RAF

P-38 Lightning without standard engines.

Another top-flight jet is the Vampire, an incredibly small yet highly maneuverable weapon. It is understood that the RAF envisions the larger Meteor as a long-range offense weapon while the Vampire will be primarily for home defense.

Production of the Lincoln Bomber, successor to Britain's big battle-of-Europe Lancaster, has been all but halted as the RAF prepares to swing into an entirely new concept of air warfare.

RAF officers expect that the new long-range jet craft, or a prototype extremely similar to it, will be able to exercise effective air control over Europe at speeds never before envisioned.

Ironically enough, Britain's severely curtailed military budgets forced overnight adoption of the jet principle.

Unlike the United States, which has funds to provide for an interim air force of conventional bombers until thorough jet research and design has been completed, the royal air force was faced with abrupt conversion or indefinite delay.

With full government support, they chose immediate conversion and decided to count on obsolescent bombers of World War II to tide them over in the interim phase.

To implement the program, the British government allocated more than two-thirds of all research and development funds to the royal air force and budgeted England's air arm at nearly 75 million dollars more annually than the royal navy.

INTER - AMERICAN TREATY DETAILS BEING FINISHED

PETROPOLIS, Aug. 28 — The inter-American defense committees smoothed out last details today of the hemispheric treaty, and a full session is expected to approve it tomorrow.

The text then will be sent to the printers prior to the formal signing by next Tuesday, when President Truman addresses the closing conference.

The treaty will bear the signatures of representatives of 19 countries. Ecuador's delegate is barred because the revolutionary government installed in his homeland has not been recognized by the other governments.

But the way apparently will be left open for both Ecuador and Nicaragua to sign at a future date. The same is true of Canada.

It is understood Canada has been approached through her ministers in Rio De Janeiro, but declined an invitation to sign in the near future.

First Graders To Tax Ohio School Facilities

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 28—The walls of Ohio's first-grade classrooms will bulge next week under the invasion of an army of 128,000 youngsters born in the year the United States went to war, but even that swollen enrollment represents only the vanguard of what is to come.

Walton B. Bliss, executive secretary of the Ohio Education Association, warned today that the supply of qualified elementary school teachers already is short, indicating that the problem of teacher personnel would become even more acute in the next several years.

Bliss pointed out that births in the state totaled 122,000 in 1941, which, with additions caused by war-time population increases, accounts for the large jump in first grade enrollment this year.

* * *

HOWEVER, he went on, births in 1946 mounted to 169,600 and "there is every indication that births in Ohio this year may exceed the record established last year."

Harold J. Bowers, state supervisor of teacher education and certification, said that a higher percentage of college graduates last June entered teaching than previously, but that all colleges and universities in the state produced only 582 elementary teachers. That number, he said, isn't enough to fill the needs of Cleveland and Cincinnati alone.

The result of the situation will be an increase from a normal ratio in elementary classes of 30 to 35 pupils per teacher to 40 to 50.

Despite the jump in the number of first graders, the OEA estimated that total school enrollment would increase only from 1,075,100 last year to 1,085,200. Bliss explained that the number of high school pupils still is declining.

Omar Khayyam, the Persian astronomer-poet of Nishapur, was born in the 11th century. His full name was Ghiyath-ud-Din Abu-l-Fath Omar ibn Ibrahim-al-Khayyami. He wrote 10 works, chief of them being the Rubaiyat. It was translated into English by Edward Fitzgerald in 1857.

ARMY RECRUIT PROGRAM FACES LARGE DEFICIT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28—A 25 per cent deficit in the Army recruiting program for the year seemed inevitable today unless recruiting this Autumn is unusually heavy.

Between Jan. 1 and Aug. 15, 170,899 men enlisted or reenlisted. This falls far short of the Army's goal of 30,000 men a month, which called for 225,000 men in seven and one half months.

Brig. Gen. B. M. Fitch, deputy chief of personnel procurement, said that there usually was a big intake of men in the Fall. He asserted that many high school graduates wanted their regular Summer vacation before joining the service at the time they usually went back to school.

In addition, Fitch asserted, high wages paid harvest hands would keep many potential soldiers in the fields until later in the year. He pointed to the fact that last year enlistments in September far outnumbered those in August.

Declining enlistments, coupled with 467,000 discharges in the first six months of the year, reduced the Army's total strength to 990,000, as of July 1. The Army is authorized 1,057,006 officers and men, and would like to make that figure 1,070,000.

UNROBED STRONG MAN LOSES $25 TO POLICE COURT

SPRINGFIELD, O., Aug. 28—A potential Charles Atlas who was hailed into Springfield court for indecent exposure was minus $25 today and reports said he was no longer exhibiting his body to the public.

Clifford Clark, 33, who had been charged with taking muscle-building exercises without wearing clothes and with the shades undrawn forfeited his bond when he failed to appear in court to answer a lesser charge of disorderly conduct.

Prosecutor George W. Cole asked that the initial charge be reduced because he did not believe Clark deliberately intended to expose himself.

Barboursville, W. Va., is of historic interest as the scene of a conflict in the U. S. Civil war, July, 1861, which ended in a Federal victory. Barboursville became a town in 1813, and was incorporated in 1867.

MACHINES PICK SWEET CORN FOR CANNING PLANTS

Mechanical Pickers Do Work Of Seven Or Eight Men In Tests Here

Mechanical sweet corn pickers capable of picking as much corn as seven or eight good men picking by hand are in operation in Pickaway county corn fields picking for the 1947 corn pack.

The result of three years experimentation to develop a machine which would eliminate the labor involved in hand picking, the pickers have only this year been placed in commercial use. Esmeralda and Winorr Canning factories each have two pickers operating in the corn fields.

* * *

TWO TYPES of pickers are being used by Esmeralda and Winorr. One is made by the Allis-Chalmer people, the other by Sargeant.

The Allis-Chalmer type, a combination sweet corn and matured field corn picker, is tractor drawn. It is the more versatile of the two and takes a smaller power to pull it. Regular Allis-Chalmer tractor or any tractor unit of similar size can handle it. A removable picking attachment can convert it into a sweet corn picker, or a field corn picker as desired.

The Sargeant was developed especially for sweet corn picking and is a large, specialized piece of machinery. Most of its weight is carried by the tractor which powers it. The picker moves ahead of the tractor. The power unit must be large to handle it.

Emmett Barnhart, Winorr Canning company, stated that either picker is capable of picking from three to five tons an hour in good corn, equivalent of the work of seven or eight men picking by hand. It averages about an acre and a half an hour in fair corn.

* * *

THE MACHINES do as good a job as hand pickers, Barnhart stated. They clean out rubbish and other waste. Picking capacity depends on weeds in the field, how much down corn there is, and how straight the rows are.

The machines eliminate much of the labor involved in sweet corn production. As the corn is picked it moves up a belt and drops into a rubber tired wagon pulled behind the tractor. The wagons hold two to three tons and when filled it can be coupled to a truck or tractor and pulled to the factory without the corn ever having been touched by hand.

Still considered in the experimental stage there are not enough machines available this year to meet farmers' demands for help in harvesting the sweet corn pack, Barnhart said.

It is expected that the pickers will greatly increase sweet corn production. Difficulty in harvesting the crop has always been encountered by sweet corn growers, and shortage of hand pickers has been acute in recent years.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN
Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

MARSHALL AND BRAMUGLIA

FROM THE inter-American defense conference in Brazil comes the heartening word that relations between the Argentine and the United States, after years of divergence, are proceeding toward mutual understanding. Substantial agreement has been reached between Secretary of State Marshall and the Argentine foreign minister, Juan Bramuglia, regarding points in the inter-American defense treaty and a united recovery plan for the entire western hemisphere.

Suspicion of the ultimate objectives of Peron is unavoidable. Nevertheless these two men, Bramuglia and Marshall, have been successful in their face to face talks, and apparently are developing warm respect for each other. With Argentina and the United States able to work in agreement, it will be easier to enlist the other South American countries in harmonious union with the United States for the good of all and as insurance against aggression from the other side of the world.

When leaders of two nations can achieve personal good will and confidence, their national affairs can usually be arranged to the advantage of both. Frank talk between individual nations is the basis of inter-nation peace. The United States can be grateful that it has as the head of its foreign department a man as strong, intelligent and forthright as General Marshall. There are few hurdles to be crossed in our relations with other Central and South American nations. If Marshall and Bramuglia can iron out some of those with the Argentine, actual gains can be made.

CUT AND PROSPER

AIRMAIL to foreign countries increased decidedly when rates were cut, reports Postmaster Albert Goldman of New York City. The monthly average from January to June, 1947, was 347,525 pounds, compared with only 202,438 in October, 1946, the last month the old rates were in effect.

The lesson that a cut in prices attracts customers is true also outside of the post-office.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28—A certain cool reserve toward the British must have been more apparent to their aid-dickerers here than to the American public. Frankly, no one from Mr. Truman on down was enthusiastic about the Anglo-Socialist government campaign to convince herself and the world that we are responsible for her troubles. The British are the only people alive who can take your money and blame you for making them take it. This requires a unique technique. Psychiatrists probably would trace it to an inferiority complex. At any rate, the British (whether Attlee or Churchill) always prepare asking for more loans or greater concessions from us by a general campaign of accusations against us. Thus the British press aspersions have practically monopolized world publicity while Washington was silent. Thus the great-thinking London economist has been telling the world the cause of the British economic crisis lies "far more with the United States than with Britain herself." The weekly has argued that the loan was too small originally, that the preferences granted American goods and dollars were "unworkable," and that high prices in America caused the British plight.

Washington did not mind withdrawing the preferences for American goods and dollars which the British promised to get the money in the loan agreement. It was handled here as a matter of routine. But no one liked the British guff which went with it. Indeed, Washington quietly watched without comment the mounting current British propaganda drive, starting with reports of Attlee's resignation, and our official dom refused to believe any of it. Ousting of Attlee for "ill health" is only one step considered by the British ('tis said commonly on the inside here) merely to create a better British propaganda around the world. The substitution of Bevin would not alter the unsuccessful socialist policies, or would the elevation of Hugh Dalton to the foreign ministry make the slightest change in foreign policy.

The latest good reporter to survey the British plight is Eugene Meyer, publisher of the Washington Post, who knows enough about finance to have been federal reserve chairman and more recently president of the world bank. Meyer reported to his paper recently the British public has not been told "the facts of life" regarding their plight, and also that socialism simply has failed to bring the needed production through which Britain could recover. Everyone knows this outside Britain. It has been evident almost officially since a British embassy official here conceded last February Britain had coal in the ground of workable thickness for a production at economic prices of 250 million tons a year for 200 years at least, but was not able last Winter to mine enough of it to keep herself warm. (He blamed shortage of miners of course, not socialism.)

Shingles No Cause For Fear

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

FORMERLY people with shingles, which is known by medical men as herpes zoster, suffered a great deal of unnecessary fear because of the old wives' tale that death would ensue should the blisters which develop in this disorder ever encircle the body.

Today, fortunately, we know that this is a mere superstition. Herpes zoster is a disorder of the skin in which blisters form along the course of one or more of the nerves which carry sensory messages from the skin to the brain to tell of heat and cold, smooth and rough, pressure and pain.

Rash on Chest

Most common place for the rash of blisters to break out is the chest, but it is often present on the face and may also affect the cornea or soft part of the eyeball.

Unfortunately, the exact cause of this condition is not known, although it is believed to be due to a virus, that is, an organism so small that it can pass through the openings in a special filter made of porcelain. There apparently is some relation between this condition and chickenpox which some doctors believe is caused by the same virus.

After Injury

Dr. Joseph V. Klauder, of Philadelphia, has reported eight cases in which the herpes zoster appeared after injury. The rash developed in the area of the injury after an interval of from one to nine days. In one case, the injury occurred on the forehead, and the rash appeared on the face on the injured side. In other cases, the injury was to the arm, the chest, and the face.

It is possible that the virus which produces the herpes zoster or shingles is present in the body at the time of an injury and that the injury permits its development or growth to go on more rapidly. In these cases in which the disorder develops following injury, healing goes on as usual, and in practically all cases, complete recovery occurs.

Pain Not Severe

The pain produced by the condition usually is not severe enough to keep the person from going about his regular activities. In some cases, particularly in those above middle age, the pain may be severe and long continued.

In those instances in which the eye is affected, the outlook for the patient, as a rule, is not quite as good since the eyesight may be damaged to some extent.

Various forms of treatment for herpes zoster have been advised. In most instances, if the rash is kept covered, it heals without any complications. The pain along the course of the affected nerve is probably the worst symptom. Injections of extract from the pituitary gland have been suggested as possibly being of some help. A physician will prescribe such drugs as may be necessary to relieve the pain temporarily.

It would appear that in some cases herpes zoster may definitely be produced by injuries of the skin. Unfortunately, no preventive measures are available in the case of such injuries to keep the disorder from developing.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

P. S.: My arms and legs remain thin even though I am gaining weight otherwise. Is there anything I can do about it?

Answer: There is no method of which I know that makes it possible to increase the size of certain parts of the body.

A CONFUSED, baffling, congested or intriguing state of affairs, possibly crystallized by peculiar snares or treachery, may be wisely approached by tact, diplomacy or finesse rather than open and belligerent attack. The mentality seems to be keen, versatile and equipped for a method or technique that should result in a triumphant crisis of major significance clearing up strange circumstances or menacing undercurrents. A sound move in the right direction should cement difficult or devasting relations, making way for welcome change and breaking up static situations. Move with patience, reserve and perseverance.

ORCHIDS for Mother

SYNOPSIS

Gail Prentice, whose parents had divorced when she was a child, knew nothing of her father, Charles, except what her gay, extravagant mother, Lissa, had told her—that he was the wealthy owner of Twin Oaks, a fine old southern estate . . . and that the inadequate income he had settled on them forced them to become what Lissa termed "professional house guests" among her many wealthy friends. Gail is surprised when, one day, Lissa asks if she would like to spend the coming summer with her father. Charles had remarried years before, and heretofore Lissa had steadfastly refused to permit Gail to visit Twin Oaks, though he and his wife had often invited her. But now, having recently met wealthy Martin Kincaid, and certain he would propose if given the right opportunity —in this instance a house party in Bermuda—Lissa convinces Gail she should accept. She hoped, too, the visit might be instrumental in obtaining an increased allowance for them. Gail is somewhat mystified when, upon alighting from the train at the small station, she is escorted to a dilapidated station wagon by attractive Greg Thompson, who introduces himself as an employe of her father—and who makes no attempt to conceal his dislike of her. She is utterly dumbfounded, however, when they pull up to a small, unpainted tenant house on the estate and Greg discloses that this is where her father lives, explaining that several years before the big house had been destroyed by fire, and continued reverses had wiped out the Prentice fortune, with the exception of the fund set aside for her mother and herself. Gail manages to hide her shock when Charles emerges to greet her, followed by Kate, his kindly, intelligent wife, and her niece, Norah, who resides with them. Their welcome was heartwarming, but later, in her small, poorly furnished room, Gail wondered how she could possibly stay the summer in a house without plumbing and electricity.

CHAPTER SIX

GAIL PULLED herself erect at last, knowing that she must soon go down to supper. She couldn't keep them waiting; that was an unpardonable sin for a guest.

She poured water into the big washbowl and bathed her face and held a cold washcloth over her smarting eyes for a moment. The suit in which she had traveled felt rumpled and untidy, and she sought in her wardrobe case for something more comfortable, more adaptable to the warm night. But she had never packed a bag in her life, nor unpacked one, and she had no idea where Jeanne, Lucia Gordon's supercilious maid, had packed anything. She came at last upon a deceptively simple pale blue linen frock—"quite the thing," a saleswoman had assured Lissa, "for dinner in the country." She hurried a little now as she got into it, pinned her pale gold hair high and slid her stockingless feet into white sandals, and went down the stairs.

They were waiting for her, she saw, as she reached the foot of the stairs. Her father had changed into khaki slacks and a shirt like Greg Thompson's; Kate had a fresh cotton house dress on and Norah was still in the pink frock.

"Oh, there you are, my dear. It's wonderful having you with us." Her father beamed at her and dropped his arm about her shoulder as he drew her toward the dining room.

The table was unexpectedly beautiful. The cloth was snow white, and the china was lovely old Haviland, the silver old and worn thin and beautifully polished. A low black glass bowl in the center was heaped with masses of the fragrant deep red roses from the many bushes out front; there were tall silver candlesticks, with white ten-cent-store candles burning in them.

As Gail's father seated her, he smiled down at her head and indicated the table silver, the candlesticks, and the china.

"A memento of the past," he told her and smiled. "About all we saved when the big house burned were such small things as we could carry out in the few minutes left us after the fire was discovered."

"I'm sorry about the house, Father," Gail said simply and honestly.

Charles Prentice, taking his place, said quietly, "So am I, chick. It would all have been yours some day. I'd hoped that you would want it."

Before she could stop herself, Gail looked at Kate, who smiled at her, obviously quite undisturbed by the thought that Charles had meant to leave the property to Gail.

Norah brought in a platter on which there was an ample roast of beef, beautifully cooked, and put it before Charles.

"Aren't we fortunate to have so much when so many people are all but begging for food?" said Kate cheerfully, beginning to serve the vegetables. "And everything raised right here at home. Norah has a pressure canner and she and I can like mad from the time the very first vegetable sticks its nose up in the garden. And there's a splendid freezer-locker plant at the county seat which we manage to keep filled with meat."

Gail murmured something, accepting the plate that Norah passed to her. Charles began an anecdote of the past, some baby adventure of Gail's. He told it well. He had a keen, dry wit, the sort that was never unkind or jeering; he had great charm of manner and he must have been tremendously good looking. He was still a handsome man, though Gail found it hard to believe that he was only forty-five, for he looked at least ten years older. His eyes were tired and his face was thin, almost gaunt, though the sun-bronze from last summer had not yet faded. Perhaps sunburn lasted here the year around, she told herself a little wildly.

She was stingingly conscious of Greg across the table throughout the meal; when she met his eyes, which she did as seldom as she could, there was the derision, the malice that made her cringe inwardly. But she kept her chin up and went steadily on with her meal, making herself laugh and chatter and play her well accustomed role as a charming house guest. From earliest childhood she had been taught that she and Lissa could not afford to be anything but agreeable and charming, since they must count on overlapping invitations in order to keep going.

The thought of Lissa weakened her a little. Lissa was spending "a few days" at a house party at Miami Beach; later, she would go north with her host and hostess, with perhaps a stop at Aiken; eventually, there would be a cruise with Martin Kincaid.

She stifled her thoughts and winked a little to keep the tears back, and went quietly on eating and being charming and interested and agreeable.

After supper, when Norah and Kate began removing the dishes and scraping plates, Gail uncertainly offered her assistance. But Kate patted her shoulders lightly and said, "In that lovely frock? And with that beautiful manicure? No, no, my dear. You run along and visit with your dad. You can help later on, after he's got over the first thrill of having you here."

Kate hesitated and then said impulsively, "It means more than I could possibly tell you, Gail, to have you here. He has been very lonely for you. He was mad about you as a baby and he's never stopped feeling bereft that he couldn't watch you grow up. I do so hope you can be happy with us and stay a long time. He needs you, dear."

Gail said, a little shaken, "I—didn't know. I'd have come a long time ago, only—well, I guess maybe I thought he didn't care about having me."

Kate bit back some angry word of condemnation that Gail knew instinctively was aimed at Lissa. She spoke gravely. "He has asked your mother many times to lend you to us."

"I—didn't know," Gail stammered again.

Kate smiled at her warmly and gave her a little push toward the hall. "Run along now and visit with him. Norah and I will have the dishes done in a jiffy."

Charles was on the veranda, seated in a shabby old wicker chair, his pipe between his teeth, when Gail came out of the hall. Greg sat on the steps, a cigaret between his fingers. Both men stood up as Gail came hesitantly out, and Greg said curtly, "I'll have a look at that ailing colt, Uncle Charles. I don't like the way he's responding to treatment."

He went off and Charles drew a chair forward for Gail and beamed happily at her.

"I hope you're going to like being here just half as much as we like having you, chick," he told her simply.

She was touched and answered swiftly, "I love it here."

He nodded.

GEORGE BREWSTER, a middle-aged character from London, plans to make his 13th attempt to swim the English channel. The previous 12 times the only thing happened was that George got wet.

* * *

English channel swimming isn't what it was a generation ago. In those days anyone who could stay afloat five minutes had a crack at it.

* * *

The channel was full of people trying to get from France to England and vice versa without paying any steamship fare.

* * *

People of many nationalities attempted to cross the channel. Sometimes the White Cliffs of Dover looked like a picnic staged by the United Nations.

Our favorite channel swimmer was a swell New York kid named Gertrude Ederle. To us the rest were just imitations.

Until Gertrude swam the channel that sport was considered strictly for the menfolk. She changed all that.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

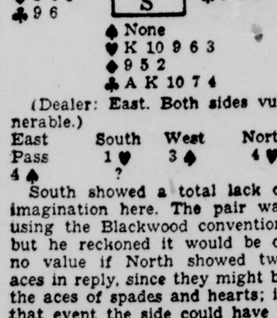
"The Authority on Authorities"

CUE BIDS INVALUABLE

REGARDLESS of whether or not the Blackwood convention is in use by a pair, cue bids to show control of specific suits nevertheless have a potent usefulness. In fact, there are situations in which they are invaluable as the only means of finding out if a big slam should be bid. That is especially so if one member of the pair is void of a suit, particularly when it happens to be the opponents' suit. In such a case, making of cue bids when there had been a chance to use the Blackwood instead is particularly informative.



(Dealer: East. Both sides vulnerable.)

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♥	3 ♠	4 ♥

South showed a total lack of imagination here. The pair was using the Blackwood convention, but he reckoned it would be of no value if North showed two aces in reply, since they might be the aces of spades and hearts; in that event the side could have a couple of diamond losers. So South merely bid 5-Hearts. There it was left, and North was deeply chagrined to lose the grand slam premium when South took all 13 tricks. He got discards of two of dummy's diamonds on clubs, then ruffed his own two diamond losers.

Refusal to use the Blackwood 4-No Trumps was sound enough by South. But he had a much better alternative — cue bids. To avoid crowding the bidding into a small slam, which a cue-bid of 5-Spades would do, he could have bid 5-Clubs first to show that suit plugged up. North then should have shown the diamond A with 5-Diamonds. Now South, feeling pretty sure of a small slam, could have cue-bid his blank with 5-Spades.

Anybody with keen perception in the North could tell from that what South was fishing around for. Since he had shown control of both black suits, also had forced the side to go to 6-Hearts if North lacked the A, that worthy would have been obliged to bid 7-Hearts with it in his hand. That is, anyone but a sissy would have bid the big slam then.

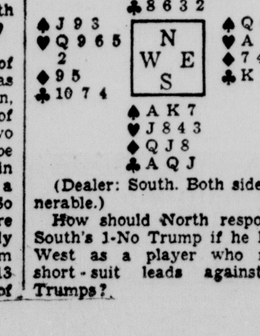
Tomorrow's Problem



(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

How should North respond to South's 1-No Trump if he knows West as a player who favors short-suit leads against No Trumps?

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE .... Hour by Hour

Up and about the ville early, taking all-out advantage of the change in temperature. Canada certainly did us a good turn with that mass of cool air, but until now she had no cool air to send us. So says Bud Harden, just returned from ten days spent up along the border. Last year at the same time a fire daily in the cabin and woolens were the order of the day in clothing. So, Budd took along woolens this trip and almost died of the heat. Caught enough fish to eat and a few extra, but not too many. Visited Sault St. Marie and at the locks engaged in conversation with a friendly citizen. Later he learned that the conversation had been recorded and broadcast over the Salue radio.

Chatted with Loring Hoffman, just back from Manitoulin and reporting the best bass fishing in many a year of endeavor. Said that Pop and Mom Betz, at the same place for a month, have been having great luck, but their vacation is near an end and they will start home this week-end ahead of the Labor Day traffic. Jim Stout, Jay Clark, Bob and Luther Bower and their wives not having too much fishing luck on Goulais bay and river, but enjoying themselves. A card from Jack Moats, who with his father, is at Lake the Woods, but no report on the luck. Plenty of fish in those waters, so they probably are doing okeh.

Durward Dowden is back at his bank presidenting job, after a vacation jaunt into Canada where he found everything burned up and the weather so hot he almost felt he erred in not staying at home. Was within 50 miles of my pet fishing hole, but did only fair in angling results. Too hot to try seriously.

Met Eldred Caycee, in town from St. Louis for a brief stay. Former manager of the Ralston Purina plant here before advancement to a more important job at the company home offices. One of the most popular out-of-towners ever in the ville, and with reason. In the nice folk category.

Met Jack Clifton, just back from pulling a horse out of an abandoned well on the George Foresman farm up South Bloomfield way. Automobile wrecker cars seem to be used for almost everything these days. Went with Jack for inspection of the Guard equipment at the Armory and was surprised. No junk at all as one might believe, but all new equipment. Rifles and machine guns; mortars, walkie-talkies, field telephones that generate their own electric impulses by utilizing the speech they transmit. Don't understand them at all, but they work. Guard on the up-grade and one day the quota will be filled.

Talked with John Boggs and John Hummel about farms and farming and learned that the heat in which we have fried has eliminated most of the fear that the corn crop will not mature. Wonder the stuff has not started popping.

Home after the stores closed at noon and soon away to Columbus on business, hoping to rush it through in time to take in a part of the State Fair. Get mad every time I go there because of the inadequate informational markers and swear never to return, but each year am lured back by something. Don't know just what.

There are few hurdles to be crossed in our relations with other Central and South American nations. If Marshall and Bramuglia can iron out some of those with the Argentine, actual gains can be made.

CUT AND PROSPER

AIRMAIL to foreign countries increased decidedly when rates were cut, reports Postmaster Albert Goldman of New York City. The monthly average from January to June, 1947, was 347,525 pounds, compared with only 202,438 in October, 1946, the last month the old rates were in effect.

The lesson that a cut in prices attracts customers is true also outside of the postoffice.

Who says these modern kids are lazy? A fourteen-year-old in West Virginia spent 700 hours building a soap box for the derby, and won the race. A lad like him might even bring in the Winter wood.

Some Americans seem to find satisfaction in seeing Britain in a hole, but the old Gospel statement still stands: "No man liveth unto himself, and no man dieth unto himself."

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28—A certain cool reserve toward the British must have been more apparent to their aid-dickerers here than to the American public. Frankly, no one from Mr. Truman on down was enthusiastic about the Anglo-Socialist government campaign to convince herself and the world that we are responsible for her troubles. The British are the only people alive who can take your money and blame you for making them take it. This requires a unique technique. Psychiatrists probably would trace it to an inferiority complex. At any rate, the British (whether Attlee or Churchill) always prepare asking for more loans or greater concessions from us by a general campaign of accusations against us. Thus the British press aspersions have practically monopolized world publicity while Washington was silent. Thus the great-thinking London economist has been telling the world the cause of the British economic crisis lies "far more with the United States than with Britain herself." The weekly has argued that the loan was too small originally, that the preferences granted American goods and dollars were "unworkable," and that high prices in America caused the British plight.

Washington did not mind withdrawing the preferences for American goods and dollars which the British promised to get the money in the loan agreement. It was handled here as a matter of routine. But no one liked the British guff which went with it. Indeed, Washington quietly watched without comment the mounting current British propaganda drive, starting with reports of Attlee's resignation, and our officialdom refused to believe any of it. Ousting of Attlee for "ill health" is only one step considered by the British ('tis said commonly on the inside here) merely to create a better British propaganda around the world. The substitution of Bevin would not alter the unsuccessful socialist policies, or would the elevation of Hugh Dalton to the foreign ministry make the slightest change in foreign policy.

The latest good reporter to survey the British plight is Eugene Meyer, publisher of the Washington Post, who knows enough about finance to have been federal reserve chairman and more recently president of the world bank. Meyer reported to his paper recently the British public has not been told "the facts of life" regarding their plight, and also that socialism simply has failed to bring the needed production through which Britain could recover. Everyone knows this outside Britain. It has been evident almost officially since a British embassy official here conceded last February Britain had coal in the ground of workable thickness for a production at economic prices of 250 million tons a year for 200 years at least, but was not able last Winter to mine enough of it to keep herself warm. (He blamed shortage of miners of course, not socialism.)

Shingles No Cause For Fear

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

FORMERLY people with shingles, which is known by medical men as herpes zoster, suffered a great deal of unnecessary fear because of the old wives' tale that death would ensue should the blisters which develop in this disorder ever encircle the body.

Today, fortunately, we know that this is a mere superstition. Herpes zoster is a disorder of the skin in which blisters form along the course of one or more of the nerves which carry sensory messages from the skin to the brain to tell of heat and cold, smooth and rough, pressure and pain.

Rash on Chest

Most common place for the rash of blisters to break out is the chest, but it is often present on the face and may also affect the cornea or soft part of the eyeball.

Unfortunately, the exact cause of this condition is not known, although it is believed to be due to a virus, that is, an organism so small that it can pass through the openings in a special filter made of porcelain. There apparently is some relation between this condition and chickenpox which some doctors believe is caused by the same virus.

After Injury

Dr. Joseph V. Klauder, of Philadelphia, has reported eight cases in which the herpes zoster appeared after injury. The rash developed in the area of the injury after an interval of from one to nine days. In one case, the injury occurred on the forehead, and the rash appeared on the face on the injured side. In other cases, the injury was to the arm, the chest, and the face.

It is possible that the virus which produces the herpes zoster or shingles is present in the body at the time of an injury and that the injury permits its development or growth to go on more rapidly. In these cases in which the disorder develops following injury, healing goes on as usual, and in practically all cases, complete recovery occurs.

Pain Not Severe

The pain produced by the condition usually is not severe enough to keep the person from going about his regular activities. In some cases, particularly in those above middle age, the pain may be severe and long continued.

In those instances in which the eye is affected, the outlook for the patient, as a rule, is not quite as good since the eyesight may be damaged to some extent.

Various forms of treatment for herpes zoster have been advised. In most instances, if the rash is kept covered, it heals without any complications. The pain along the course of the affected nerve is probably the worst symptom. Injections of extract from the pituitary gland have been suggested as possibly being of some help. A physician will prescribe such drugs as may be necessary to relieve the pain temporarily.

It would appear that in some cases herpes zoster may definitely be produced by injuries of the skin. Unfortunately, no preventive measures are available in the case of such injuries to keep the disorder from developing.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

P. S.: My arms and legs remain thin even though I am gaining weight otherwise. Is there anything I can do about it?

Answer: There is no method of which I know that makes it possible to increase the size of certain parts of the body.

A CONFUSED, baffling, congested or intriguing state of affairs, possibly crystallized by peculiar snares or treachery, may be wisely approached by tact, diplomacy or finesse rather than open and belligerent attack. The mentality seems to be keen, versatile and equipped for a method or technique that should result in a triumphant crisis of major significance clearing up strange circumstances or menacing undercurrents. A sound move in the right direction should cement difficult or devasting relations, making way for welcome change and breaking up static situations. Move with patience, reserve and perseverance.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may enter a year in which their most substantial progress may be made by a calm, shrewd, patient and determined course of action, sustained by diplomacy and tact based on thorough insight into strange or static undercurrents. Finesse and discretion may work wonders in getting at the obscure and hidden source of things. Results may be more stable and far-reaching than anticipated.

ORCHIDS for Mother

SYNOPSIS

Gail Prentice, whose parents had divorced when she was a child, knew nothing of her father, Charles, except what her gay, extravagant mother, Lissa, had told her—that he was the wealthy owner of Twin Oaks, a fine old southern estate . . . and that the inadequate income he had settled on them forced them to become what Lissa termed "professional house guests" among her many wealthy friends. Gail is surprised when, one day, Lissa asks if she would like to spend the coming summer with her father. Charles had remarried years before, and heretofore Lissa had steadfastly refused to permit Gail to visit Twin Oaks, though he and his wife had often invited her. But now, having recently met wealthy Martin Kincaid, and certain he would propose if given the right opportunity—in this instance a house party in Bermuda—Lissa convinces Gail she should accept. She hoped, too, the visit might be instrumental in obtaining an increased allowance for them. Gail is somewhat mystified when, upon alighting from the train at the small station, she is escorted to a dilapidated station wagon by attractive Greg Thompson, who introduces himself as an employe of her father—and who makes no attempt to conceal his dislike of her. She is utterly dumbfounded, however, when they pull up to a small, unpainted tenant house on the estate and Greg discloses that this is where her father lives, explaining that several years before the big house had been destroyed by fire, and continued reverses had wiped out the Prentice fortune, with the exception of the fund set aside for her mother and herself. Gail manages to hide her shock when Charles emerges to greet her, followed by Kate, his kindly, intelligent wife, and her niece, Norah, who resides with them. Their welcome was heartwarming, but later, in her small, poorly furnished room, Gail wondered how she could possibly stay the summer in a house without plumbing and electricity.

CHAPTER SIX

GAIL PULLED herself erect at last, knowing that she must soon go down to supper. She couldn't keep them waiting; that was an unpardonable sin for a guest.

She poured water into the big washbowl and bathed her face and held a cold washcloth over her smarting eyes for a moment. The suit in which she had traveled felt rumpled and untidy, and she sought in her wardrobe case for something more comfortable, more adaptable to the warm night. But she had never packed a bag in her life, nor unpacked one, and she had no idea where Jeanne, Lucia Gordon's supercilious maid, had packed anything. She came at last upon a deceptively simple pale blue linen frock—"quite the thing," a saleswoman had assured Lissa, "for dinner in the country." She hurried a little now as she got into it, pinned her pale gold hair high and slid her stockingless feet into white sandals, and went down the stairs.

They were waiting for her, she saw, as she reached the foot of the stairs. Her father had changed into khaki slacks and a shirt like Greg Thompson's; Kate had a fresh cotton house dress on and Norah was still in the pink frock.

"Oh, there you are, my dear. It's wonderful having you with us." Her father beamed at her and dropped his arm about her shoulder as he drew her toward the dining room.

The table was unexpectedly beautiful. The cloth was snow white, and the china was lovely old Haviland, the silver old and worn thin and beautifully polished. A low black glass bowl in the center was heaped with masses of the fragrant deep red roses from the many bushes out front; there were tall silver candlesticks, with white ten-cent-store candles burning in them.

As Gail's father seated her, he smiled down at her head and indicated the table silver, the candlesticks, and the china.

"A memento of the past," he told her and smiled. "About all we saved when the big house burned were such small things as we could carry out in the few minutes left us after the fire was discovered."

"I'm sorry about the house, Father," Gail said simply and honestly.

Charles Prentice, taking his place, said quietly, "So am I, chick. It would all have been yours some day. I'd hoped that you would want it."

Before she could stop herself, Gail looked at Kate, who smiled at her, obviously quite undisturbed by the thought that Charles had meant to leave the property to Gail.

Norah brought in a platter on which there was an ample roast of beef, beautifully cooked, and put it before Charles.

"Aren't we fortunate to have so much when so many people are all but begging for food?" said Kate cheerfully, beginning to serve the vegetables. "And everything raised right here at home. Norah has a pressure canner and she and I can like mad from the time the very first vegetable sticks its nose up in the garden. And there's a splendid freezer-locker plant at the county seat which we manage to keep filled with meat."

Gail murmured something, accepting the plate that Norah passed to her. Charles began an anecdote of the past, some baby adventure of Gail's. He told it well. He had a keen, dry wit, the sort that was never unkind or jeering; he had great charm of manner and he must have been tremendously good looking. He was still a handsome man, though Gail found it hard to believe that he was only forty-five, for he looked at least ten years older. His eyes were tired and his face was thin, almost gaunt, though the sun-bronze from last summer had not yet faded. Perhaps sunburn lasted here the year around, she told herself a little wildly.

She was stingingly conscious of Greg across the table throughout the meal; when she met his eyes, which she did as seldom as she could, there was the derision, the malice that made her cringe inwardly. But she kept her chin up and went steadily on with her meal, making herself laugh and chatter and play her well accustomed role as a charming house guest. From earliest childhood she had been taught that she and Lissa could not afford to be anything but agreeable and charming, since they must count on overlapping invitations in order to keep going.

The thought of Lissa weakened her a little. Lissa was spending "a few days" at a house party at Miami Beach; later, she would go north with her host and hostess, with perhaps a stop at Aiken; eventually, there would be a cruise with Martin Kincaid.

She stifled her thoughts and winked a little to keep the tears back, and went quietly on eating and being charming and interested and agreeable.

After supper, when Norah and Kate began removing the dishes and scraping plates, Gail uncertainly offered her assistance. But Kate patted her shoulders lightly and said, "In that lovely frock? And with that beautiful manicure? No, no, my dear. You run along and visit with your dad. You can help later on, after he's got over the first thrill of having you here."

Kate hesitated and then said impulsively, "It means more than I could possibly tell you, Gail, to have you here. He has been very lonely for you. He was mad about you as a baby and he's never stopped feeling bereft that he couldn't watch you grow up. I do so hope you can be happy with us and stay a long time. He needs you, dear."

Gail said, a little shaken, "I—didn't know. I'd have come a long time ago, only—well, I guess maybe I thought he didn't care about having me."

Kate bit back some angry word of condemnation that Gail knew instinctively was aimed at Lissa. She spoke gravely. "He has asked your mother many times to lend you to us."

"I—didn't know," Gail stammered again.

Kate smiled at her warmly and gave her a little push toward the hall. "Run along now and visit with him. Norah and I will have the dishes done in a jiffy."

Charles was on the veranda, seated in a shabby old wicker chair, his pipe between his teeth, when Gail came out of the hall. Greg sat on the steps, a cigaret between his fingers. Both men stood up as Gail came hesitantly out, and Greg said curtly, "I'll have a look at that ailing colt, Uncle Charles. I don't like the way he's responding to treatment."

He went off and Charles drew a chair forward for Gail and beamed happily at her.

"I hope you're going to like being here just half as much as we like having you, chick," he told her simply.

She was touched and answered swiftly, "I love it here."

He nodded.

YOU'RE TELLING ME!

GEORGE BREWSTER, a middle-aged character from London, plans to make his 13th attempt to swim the English channel. The previous 12 times the only thing happened was that George got wet.

* * *

English channel swimming isn't what it was a generation ago. In those days anyone who could stay afloat five minutes had a crack at it.

* * *

The channel was full of people trying to get from France to England and vice versa without paying any steamship fare.

* * *

People of many nationalities attempted to cross the channel. Sometimes the White Cliffs of Dover looked like a picnic staged by the United Nations.

* * *

Our favorite channel swimmer was a swell New York kid named Gertrude Ederle. To us the rest were just imitations.

* * *

Until Gertrude swam the channel that sport was considered strictly for the menfolk. She changed all that.

As for Brewster, we wish him luck. The fact that this is his 13th try shouldn't faze him. He can't have any worse luck than he had the last 12 times.

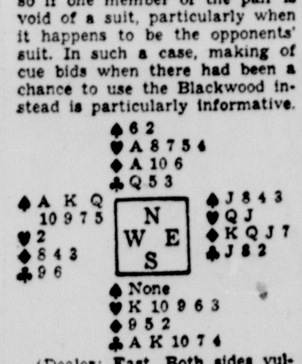
"The Authority on Authorities"

CUE BIDS INVALUABLE

REGARDLESS of whether or not the Blackwood convention is in use by a pair, cue bids to show control of specific suits nevertheless have a potent usefulness. In fact, there are situations in which they are invaluable as the only means of finding out if a big slam should be bid. That is especially so if one member of the pair is void of a suit, particularly when it happens to be the opponents' suit. In such a case, making of cue bids when there had been a chance to use the Blackwood instead is particularly informative.



(Dealer: East. Both sides vulnerable.)

East	South	West	North

South showed a total lack of imagination here. The pair was using the Blackwood convention, but he reckoned it would be of no value if North showed two aces in reply, since they might be the aces of spades and hearts; in that event the side could have a couple of diamond losers. So South merely bid 5-Hearts. There it was left, and North was deeply chagrined to lose the grand slam premium when South took all 13 tricks. He got discards of two of dummy's diamonds on clubs, then ruffed his own two diamond losers.

Refusal to use the Blackwood 4-No Trumps was sound enough by South. But he had a much better alternative—cue bids. To avoid crowding the bidding into a small slam, which a cue-bid of 5-Spades would do, he could have bid 5-Clubs first to show that suit plugged up. North then should have shown the diamond A with 5-Diamonds. Now South, feeling pretty sure of a small slam, could have cue-bid his blank with 5-Spades.

Anybody with keen perception in the North could tell from that what South was fishing around for. Since he had shown control of both black suits, also had forced the side to go to 6-Hearts if North lacked the A, that worthy would have been obliged to bid 7-Hearts with it in his hand. That is, anyone but a sissy would have bid the big slam then.

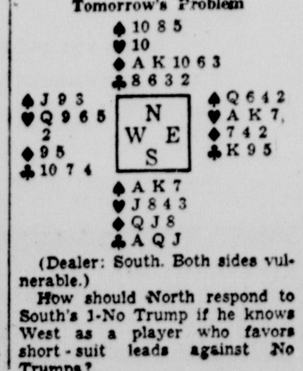
Tomorrow's Problem



(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

How should North respond to South's 1-No Trump if he knows West as a player who favors short-suit leads against No Trumps?

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . . . . Hour by Hour

Up and about the ville early, taking all-out advantage of the change in temperature. Canada certainly did us a good turn with that mass of cool air, but until now she had no cool air to send us. So says Bud Harden, just returned from ten days spent up along the border. Last year at the same time a fire daily in the cabin and woolens were the order of the day in clothing. So, Budd took along woolens this trip and almost died of the heat. Caught enough fish to eat and a few extra, but not too many. Visited Sault St. Marie and at the locks engaged in conversation with a friendly citizen. Later he learned that the conversation had been recorded and broadcast over the Salue radio.

Chatted with Loring Hoffman, just back from Manitoulin and reporting the best bass fishing in many a year of endeavor. Said that Pop and Mom Betz, at the same place for a month, have been having great luck, but their vacation is near an end and they will start home this week-end ahead of the Labor Day traffic. Jim Stout, Jay Clark, Bob and Luther Bower and their wives not having too much fishing luck on Goulais bay and river, but enjoying themselves. A card from Jack Moats, who with his father, is at Lake the Woods, but no report on the luck. Plenty of fish in those waters, so they probably are doing okeh.

Durward Dowden is back at his bank presidenting job, after a vacation jaunt into Canada where he found everything burned up and the weather so hot he almost felt he erred in not staying at home. Was within 50 miles of my pet fishing hole, but did only fair in angling results. Too hot to try seriously.

Met Eldred Caycee, in town from St. Louis for a brief stay. Former manager of the Ralston Purina plant here before advancement to a more important job at the company home offices. One of the most popular out-of-towners ever in the ville, and with reason. In the nice folk category.

Met Jack Clifton, just back from pulling a horse out of an abandoned well on the George Foresman farm up South Bloomfield way. Automobile wrecker cars seem to be used for almost everything these days. Went with Jack for inspection of the Guard equipment at the Armory and was surprised. No junk at all as one might believe, but all new equipment. Rifles and machine guns; mortars, walkie-talkies, field telephones that generate their own electric impulses by utilizing the speech they transmit. Don't understand them at all, but they work. Guard on the up-grade and one day the quota will be filled.

Talked with John Boggs and John Hummel about farms and farming and learned that the heat in which we have fried has eliminated most of the fear that the corn crop will not mature. Wonder the stuff has not started popping.

Home after the stores closed at noon and soon away to Columbus on business, hoping to rush it through in time to take in a part of the State Fair. Get mad every time I go there because of the inadequate informational markers and swear never to return, but each year am lured back by something. Don't know just what.

A CHICKEN DELICACY

A barbecue sauce makes broiled chicken a real delicacy

By BETTY NEWTON

Chicken broiled with a barbecue sauce is a delicacy which will surpass all expectations! When served with that all-American favorite, corn pudding, and topped off with fresh peach cobbler for dessert, you'll have all kinds of compliments flying your way.

Barbecued Chicken

- 2 broilers
- 5 Tbsp. vinegar
- 4 Tbsp. catsup

- 2 Tbsp. lemon juice
- ⅝ C. water
- ¼ C. drippings
- 1 tsp. salt

Arrange quartered or halved broilers on broiling pan, but not on broiling rack. Pour the barbecue sauce over them. Place on low broiling position and broil under low flame about 1 hour or until tender. Turn chicken often and baste often with the sauce from the pan.

Barbecue Sauce: — Mix all ingredients together and simmer a few minutes before pouring over chicken.

Fresh Corn Pudding

- 2½ C. milk
- 1 Tbsp. fat
- 1 tsp. salt
- ¼ tsp. pepper
- ½ tsp. paprika
- 3 Tbsp. corn meal

GOVERNOR'S DAY BEING OBSERVED AT STATE FAIR

Farnsworth Does Not Expect New Fairgrounds To Be Ready Before 1949

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 28—Governor Herbert making his first official visit to the Ohio State Fair at Columbus today as the exposition celebrated Governor's Day.

Fair officials were hopeful that coincident with the chief executive's tour of the 93rd fair attendance would surpass yesterday's 1947 high of 71,352. The top mark set previously was 65,914 paid admissions on Sunday, but Wednesday's figure was 4,712 less than last year's record of 76,064 chalked up on the same day.

• • •

MEANWHILE, Columbus police plainclothesmen and state highway patrolmen cracked down on one visitor to the sprawling exposition who admitted he was attempting to operate a book on the harness races.

City detective chief Glenn Hoffman and state highway patrol Lt. Scott Radcliff said that the man told authorities that he intended to operate among the horsemen themselves but he was apprehended in the horse barns before the first race was run and was ejected from the grounds.

Police did not charge him because they said they had insufficient evidence.

At the same time both Hoffman and Radcliff declared that previous rumors of a book in successful operation proved unfounded after diligent investigation.

WHILE VISITORS thronged the exhibits, races, horse show and concessions during director of agriculture day yesterday, Bernadine Parsons, 16-year-old blonde, blue-eyed junior at Rising Sun high school, was named queen of the Ohio Future Farmers of America.

Also honored at yesterday's session were Ohio's flying farmers and the Buckeye boys and girls state. Officials greeted four visiting feminine flying farmers from Oklahoma who stopped off to join the Ohio delegation on their way to the national air races at Cleveland.

At the same time state agriculture director Frank N. Farnsworth said he did not foresee the possibility of a new fairgrounds at least until 1949. His statement came in answer to observations that some of the buildings on the 50-year-old grounds appeared to be unsafe.

The fair closes its week-long run tomorrow, which has been designated press day.

Caused Navy Rap

WHEN Federal Judge Michael Roche, San Francisco, released Norman Fish (above), former U. S. Navy sailor of Jamaica, N. Y., he directed sharp criticism at the Navy officials who held Fish "in the brig" for two months. The charge involved the disappearance of two typewriters. Judge Roche pointed out that Fish was freed without prosecution after challenging the Navy's jurisdiction. (International)

In classical myth, Fortuna was the goddess of chance or good luck, worshipped especially at Rome, where she was thought to be the bearer of prosperity. She was represented as a winged maiden propelling or propelled by a small wheel under one foot, and carrying a cornucopia in her right hand which she emptied along the way with her left. Like Plutus, her eyes were bandaged.

GOVERNOR'S DAY BEING OBSERVED AT STATE FAIR

Farnsworth Does Not Expect New Fairgrounds To Be Ready Before 1949

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 28—Governor Herbert making his first official visit to the Ohio State Fair at Columbus today as the exposition celebrated Governor's Day.

Fair officials were hopeful that coincident with the chief executive's tour of the 93rd fair attendance would surpass yesterday's 1947 high of 71,352. The top mark set previously was 65,914 paid admissions on Sunday, but Wednesday's figure was 4,712 less than last year's record of 76,064 chalked up on the same day.

• • •

MEANWHILE, Columbus police plainclothesmen and state highway patrolmen cracked down on one visitor to the sprawling exposition who admitted he was attempting to operate a book on the harness races.

City detective chief Glenn Hoffman and state highway patrol Lt. Scott Radcliff said that the man told authorities that he intended to operate among the horsemen themselves but he was apprehended in the horse barns before the first race was run and was ejected from the grounds.

Police did not charge him because they said they had insufficient evidence.

At the same time both Hoffman and Radcliff declared that previous rumors of a book in successful operation proved unfounded after diligent investigation.

WHILE VISITORS thronged the exhibits, races, horse show and concessions during director of agriculture day yesterday, Bernadine Parsons, 16-year-old blonde, blue-eyed junior at Rising Sun high school, was named queen of the Ohio Future Farmers of America.

Also honored at yesterday's session were Ohio's flying farmers and the Buckeye boys and girls state. Officials greeted four visiting feminine flying farmers from Oklahoma who stopped off to join the Ohio delegation on their way to the national air races at Cleveland.

At the same time state agriculture director Frank N. Farnsworth said he did not foresee the possibility of a new fairgrounds at least until 1949. His statement came in answer to observations that some of the buildings on the 50-year-old grounds appeared to be unsafe.

The fair closes its week-long run tomorrow, which has been designated press day.

Caused Navy Rap

WHEN Federal Judge Michael Roche, San Francisco, released Norman Fish (above), former U. S. Navy sailor of Jamaica, N. Y., he directed sharp criticism at the Navy officials who held Fish "in the brig" for two months. The charge involved the disappearance of two typewriters. Judge Roche pointed out that Fish was freed without prosecution after challenging the Navy's jurisdiction. (International)

In classical myth, Fortuna was the goddess of chance or good luck, worshipped especially at Rome, where she was thought to be the bearer of prosperity. She was represented as a winged maiden propelling or propelled by a small wheel under one foot, and carrying a cornucopia in her right hand which she emptied along the way with her left. Like Plutus, her eyes were Bandaged.

GREEK GENERAL CLAIMS REBELS CAN BE STOPPED

Acting Minister Of Public Order Says Wrong Tactics Being Used

By GEN. NAPOLEON ZERVAS
Acting Greek Minister of Public Order

(Copyright 1947 by International News Service)

ATHENS, Aug. 28—The Greek army has failed in striking a decisive blow against the guerrillas.

It is only with counter-guerrilla tactics that the Communist-led guerrillas can be defeated.

As minister of public order in the Greek government, a parliamentary party leader and the commander-in-chief of the national resistance forces during the axis occupation, I can authoritatively state that while the present situation in Greece is certainly critical it is by no means insoluble.

• • •

THE FAILURE thus far of the Greek governments to solve the steadily decreasing military situation in the countryside is mainly due to the application by them of inappropriate methods.

Most of the responsibility for the suppression of the guerrilla movement has been placed on the Greek army, whose organization and strategy is entirely unsuited for guerrilla warfare.

For three years as commander of some ten thousand guerrillas, day after day and night after night I delivered against the mighty occupation forces of Italy and Germany some of the heaviest blows they received in any occupied country of Europe.

Yet not only were my forces never defeated by the all-powerful wehrmacht or Mussolini's legions but they grew stronger with every day that went by.

These same forces which managed to stand against the axis armies were in a number of cases badly harassed by the guerrilla forces of the Communist-controlled E.L.A.S.

As a veteran guerrilla myself, I can assure that very little can be done against guerrilla forces by regular army tactics.

• • •

ONE REASON for the poor results of the anti-guerrilla operations which were carried out five months ago throughout the mountainous areas of Rumeli and Thessaly is that they were based on plans drawn by the general staff many months before the operations were started. Guerrilla strength and disposition of their forces had in the meantine entirely changed.

Greek army units organized on the standards and system of the British army are far too rigid to be able to execute the swift movements which are necessary if drastic blows are to be struck at the rebels.

In addition they have the disadvantage of a too-elaborate organization which absorbs—without any advantage for guerrilla warfare—a great percentage of their strength.

Out of one hundred fifty men of an army company, auxiliary services absorb about half of its total strength.

• • •

THE REGULAR army soldier's training is for a different type of warfare in which individual initiative plays an inferior role to tactical discipline.

In guerrilla or anti-guerrilla warfare, each man in himself constitutes a whole unit, whose courage, initiative and strategy may win or lose the battle.

This may account for the heavy losses suffered by many Greek army units during fighting against the Communist-led guerrillas. These losses become more impressive when compared to those of the few existing "commando units" which though for many months in constant fighting against the bands have suffered negligible losses.

If the guerrilla movement is to be efficiently faced it can only be done by forces which can move as rapidly, strike as unexpectedly and disappear as quietly as the guerrillas.

INVITATION FROM DEATH

VANCOUVER, B. C.—It took French and Canadian government and Vancouver police officials seven years to identify the body of a man drowned off the French coast. The corpse was that of a British Columbia sailor, Richard Baxter, who died in action during the war. Baxter's body was found on the shore at Soulac-surmer, in Southern France, July 25, 1940. On his person was found a soaked invitation to a Vancouver wedding. The invitation proved the clue which led Ottawa police to the correct identity.

URGES RUHR CONTROL

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28—Rep. Kelley (D) Pa., proposed today that the United States relieve the British of all control over the Ruhr coal mining operations in Germany. Kelley just returned from a survey of western Europe. The congressman said that the United States, by the use of "topflight technicians and managers," would be able to boost the vital Ruhr coal production to prewar levels.

GOVERNOR'S DAY BEING OBSERVED AT STATE FAIR

Farnsworth Does Not Expect New Fairgrounds To Be Ready Before 1949

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 28—Governor Herbert making his first official visit to the Ohio State Fair at Columbus today as the exposition celebrated Governor's Day.

Fair officials were hopeful that coincident with the chief executive's tour of the 93rd fair attendance would surpass yesterday's 1947 high of 71,352. The top mark set previously was 65,914 paid admissions on Sunday, but Wednesday's figure was 4,712 less than last year's record of 76,064 chalked up on the same day.

• • •

MEANWHILE, Columbus police plainclothesmen and state highway patrolmen cracked down on one visitor to the sprawling exposition who admitted he was attempting to operate a book on the harness races.

City detective chief Glenn Hoffman and state highway patrol Lt. Scott Radcliff said that the man told authorities that he intended to operate among the horsemen themselves but he was apprehended in the horse barns before the first race was run and was ejected from the grounds.

Police did not charge him because they said they had insufficient evidence.

At the same time both Hoffman and Radcliff declared that previous rumors of a book in successful operation proved unfounded after diligent investigation.

• • •

WHILE VISITORS thronged the exhibits, races, horse show and concessions during director of agriculture day yesterday, Bernadine Parsons, 16-year-old blonde, blue-eyed junior at Rising Sun high school, was named queen of the Ohio Future Farmers of America.

Also honored at yesterday's session were Ohio's flying farmers and the Buckeye boys and girls state. Officials greeted four visiting feminine flying farmers from Oklahoma who stopped off to join the Ohio delegation on their way to the national air races at Cleveland.

At the same time state agriculture director Frank N. Farnsworth said he did not foresee the possibility of a new fairgrounds at least until 1949. His statement came in answer to observations that some of the buildings on the 50-year-old grounds appeared to be unsafe.

The fair closes its week-long run tomorrow, which has been designated press day.

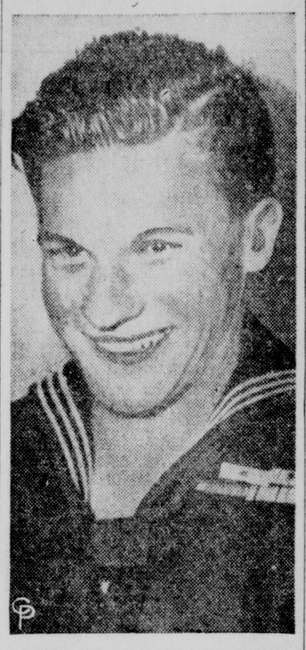
Caused Navy Rap



WHEN Federal Judge Michael Roche, San Francisco, released Norman Fish (above), former U. S. Navy sailor of Jamaica, N. Y., he directed sharp criticism at the Navy officials who held Fish "in the brig" for two months. The charge involved the disappearance of two typewriters. Judge Roche pointed out that Fish was freed without prosecution after challenging the Navy's jurisdiction. (International)

In classical myth, Fortuna was the goddess of chance or good luck, worshipped especially at Rome, where she was thought to be the bearer of prosperity. She was represented as a winged maiden propelling or propelled by a small wheel under one foot, and carrying a cornucopia in her right hand which she emptied along the way with her left. Like Plutus, her eyes were bandaged.

GREEK GENERAL CLAIMS REBELS CAN BE STOPPED

Acting Minister Of Public Order Says Wrong Tactics Being Used

By GEN. NAPOLEON ZERVAS
Acting Greek Minister of Public Order

(Copyright 1947 by International News Service)

ATHENS, Aug. 28—The Greek army has failed in striking a decisive blow against the guerrillas.

It is only with counter-guerrilla tactics that the Communist-led guerrillas can be defeated.

As minister of public order in the Greek government, a parliamentary party leader and the commander-in-chief of the national resistance forces during the axis occupation, I can authoritatively state that while the present situation in Greece is certainly critical it is by no means insoluble.

* * *

THE FAILURE thus far of the Greek governments to solve the steadily decreasing military situation in the countryside is mainly due to the application by them of inappropriate methods.

Most of the responsibility for the suppression of the guerrilla movement has been placed on the Greek army, whose organization and strategy is entirely unsuited for guerrilla warfare.

For three years as commander of some ten thousand guerrillas, day after day and night after night I delivered against the mighty occupation forces of Italy and Germany some of the heaviest blows they received in any occupied country of Europe.

Yet not only were my forces never defeated by the all-powerful wehrmacht or Mussolini's legions but they grew stronger with every day that went by.

These same forces which managed to stand against the axis armies were in a number of cases badly harassed by the guerrilla forces of the Communist-controlled E.L.A.S.

As a veteran guerrilla myself, I can assure that very little can be done against guerrilla forces by regular army tactics.

* * *

ONE REASON for the poor results of the anti-guerrilla operations which were carried out five months ago throughout the mountainous areas of Rumeli and Thessaly is that they were based on plans drawn by the general staff many months before the operations were started. Guerrilla strength and disposition of their forces had in the meantime entirely changed.

Greek army units organized on the standards and system of the British army are far too rigid to be able to execute the swift movements which are necessary if drastic blows are to be struck at the rebels.

In addition they have the disadvantage of a too-elaborate organization which absorbs—without any advantage for guerrilla warfare—a great percentage of their strength.

Out of one hundred fifty men of an army company, auxiliary services absorb about half of its total strength.

* * *

THE REGULAR army soldier's training is for a different type of warfare in which individual initiative plays an inferior role to tactical discipline.

In guerrilla or anti-guerrilla warfare, each man in himself constitutes a whole unit, whose courage, initiative and strategy may win or lose the battle.

This may account for the heavy losses suffered by many Greek army units during fighting against the Communist-led guerrillas. These losses become more impressive when compared to those of the few existing "commando units" which though for many months in constant fighting against the bands have suffered negligible losses.

If the guerrilla movement is to be efficiently faced it can only be done by forces which can move as rapidly, strike as unexpectedly and disappear as quietly as the guerrillas.

INVITATION FROM DEATH

VANCOUVER, B. C.—It took French and Canadian government and Vancouver police officials seven years to identify the body of a man drowned off the French coast. The corpse was that of a British Columbia sailor, Richard Baxter, who died in action during the war. Baxter's body was found on the shore at Soulac-surmer, in Southern France, July 25, 1940. On his person was found a soaked invitation to a Vancouver wedding. The invitation proved the clue which led Ottawa police to the correct identity.

URGES RUHR CONTROL

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28—Rep. Kelley (D) Pa., proposed today that the United States relieve the British of all control over the Ruhr coal mining operations in Germany. Kelley just returned from a survey of western Europe. The congressman said that the United States, by the use of "topflight technicians and managers," would be able to boost the vital Ruhr coal production to prewar levels.

GREEK GENERAL CLAIMS REBELS CAN BE STOPPED

Acting Minister Of Public Order Says Wrong Tactics Being Used

By GEN. NAPOLEON ZERVAS
Acting Greek Minister of Public Order

(Copyright 1947 by International News Service)

ATHENS, Aug. 28—The Greek army has failed in striking a decisive blow against the guerrillas.

It is only with counter-guerrilla tactics that the Communist-led guerrillas can be defeated.

As minister of public order in the Greek government, a parliamentary party leader and the commander-in-chief of the national resistance forces during the axis occupation, I can authoritatively state that while the present situation in Greece is certainly critical it is by no means insoluble.

• • •

THE FAILURE thus far of the Greek governments to solve the steadily decreasing military situation in the countryside is mainly due to the application by them of inappropriate methods.

Most of the responsibility for the suppression of the guerrilla movement has been placed on the Greek army, whose organization and strategy is entirely unsuited for guerrilla warfare.

For three years as commander of some ten thousand guerrillas, day after day and night after night I delivered against the mighty occupation forces of Italy and Germany some of the heaviest blows they received in any occupied country of Europe.

Yet not only were my forces never defeated by the all-powerful wehrmacht or Mussolini's legions but they grew stronger with every day that went by.

RUSSIANS WANT TO GAIN FAVOR OF OUTSIDERS

Travel Restrictions Block Opportunity For World To Get Understanding

By PAUL F. WHITE
Chief of the UNRRA mission to the Soviet Ukraine

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28—The Russian people are today very anxious to gain the understanding and friendship of the outside world but they show little aptitude for achieving their purpose.

By restricting foreign travel in the Soviet Union they have succeeded in creating a mystery where none exists and in so doing miss the opportunity for understanding that normally would flow from more ready access to the vast country.

During my 16 months as chief of the UNRRA relief mission to the Soviet Ukraine I traveled to all parts of the Soviet Union, covering some 25,000 miles in everything from plane to droshky, and reaching many areas that had been closed to foreigners since 1939.

In my travels I found the western Ukraine the best illustration of the shortcomings of the Russian policy of excluding visitors.

* * *

THIS SECTION of the Ukraine is composed of areas formerly under Polish, Czechoslovakian and Romanian control. Russia got parts of it in 1939 and the rest in 1945. Until our mission secured permission to visit the area it had been "terra incognita" to all but Germans, Russians and the local populations since 1939.

The western world had so little knowledge of conditions in the western Ukraine that there naturally arose a great deal of speculation that took rather lurid forms, in view of what was known of the exchange of populations and the many shifts in control during the war.

The western Ukraine is an area which appears to be industriously occupied with restoring its economic, social and intellectual life. New industries are being set up, old ones expanded and the people appear as happy as can be expected under the hardships of the postwar era.

* * *

WHEN THE RUSSIANS took over the area they offered the people the opportunity of returning to their native Poland, Romania or Czechoslovakia, as the case might be.

So far as I had the opportunity to observe, a reasonable policy of exchange of populations took place, by which the people had the opportunity to determine voluntarily whether they wanted to stay in Soviet territory or return to the old country.

Many of the Poles, who constituted a substantial minority, chose to pull up stakes and leave for Poland. There was only a small movement of populations in the Czech areas where the people are principally of Russian and Ukrainian stocks.

There has occured in the western Ukraine some rather strange amalgamation of Soviet ways and the old ways. It was interesting to note that in this primarily agricultural area Soviet agricultural collectivization covers only a small percentage of the economy. The first steps of agricultural reform have been directed by the new rulers toward granting land to the landless peasants.

I SAW NO evidence of a concerted drive by the Soviets toward collectivization. One official told me that Russia hopes to convenience of the western Ukrainian peasants of the benefits of collectivization by the example of the greater economic prosperity of the few collectives in existence.

This may be an indication that the Soviets can learn a lesson from the past. They may recall what tragic consequences followed in the early days of the Soviet Union when collectivization of farms was instituted at too rapid a pace and with too great pressure.

RUSSIANS WANT TO GAIN FAVOR OF OUTSIDERS

Travel Restrictions Block Opportunity For World To Get Understanding

By PAUL F. WHITE
Chief of the UNRRA mission to the Soviet Ukraine

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28—The Russian people are today very anxious to gain the understanding and friendship of the outside world but they show little aptitude for achieving their purpose.

By restricting foreign travel in the Soviet Union they have succeeded in creating a mystery where none exists and in so doing miss the opportunity for understanding that normally would flow from more ready access to the vast country.

During my 16 months as chief of the UNRRA relief mission to the Soviet Ukraine I traveled to all parts of the Soviet Union, covering some 25,000 miles in everything from plane to droshky, and reaching many areas that had been closed to foreigners since 1939.

In my travels I found the western Ukraine the best illustration of the shortcomings of the Russian policy of excluding visitors.

* * *

THIS SECTION of the Ukraine is composed of areas formerly under Polish, Czechoslovakian and Romanian control. Russia got parts of it in 1939 and the rest in 1945. Until our mission secured permission to visit the area it had been "terra incognita" to all but Germans, Russians and the local populations since 1939.

The western world had so little knowledge of conditions in the western Ukraine that there naturally arose a great deal of speculation that took rather lurid forms, in view of what was known of the exchange of populations and the many shifts in control during the war.

The western Ukraine is an area which appears to be industriously occupied with restoring its economic, social and intellectual life. New industries are being set up, old ones expanded and the people appear as happy as can be expected under the hardships of the postwar era.

* * *

WHEN THE RUSSIANS took over the area they offered the people the opportunity of returning to their native Poland, Romania or Czechoslovakia, as the case might be.

So far as I had the opportunity to observe, a reasonable policy of exchange of populations took place, by which the people had the opportunity to determine voluntarily whether they wanted to stay in Soviet territory or return to the old country.

Many of the Poles, who constituted a substantial minority, chose to pull up stakes and leave for Poland. There was only a small movement of populations in the Czech areas where the people are principally of Russian and Ukrainian stocks.

There has occured in the western Ukraine some rather strange amalgamation of Soviet ways and the old ways. It was interesting to note that in this primarily agricultural area Soviet agricultural collectivization covers only a small percentage of the economy. The first steps of agricultural reform have been directed by the new rulers toward granting land to the landless peasants.

I SAW NO evidence of a concerted drive by the Soviets toward collectivization. One official told me that Russia hopes to convenience of the western Ukrainian peasants of the benefits of collectivization by the example of the greater economic prosperity of the few collectives in existence.

This may be an indication that the Soviets can learn a lesson from the past. They may recall what tragic consequences followed in the early days of the Soviet Union when collectivization of farms was instituted at too rapid a pace and with too great pressure.

CARDS LOSE 6-4 TO HOME-RUN HITTING GIANTS

Big John Mize Belts 43rd Homer Of Season To Tie Own Mark Set In 1940

NEW YORK, Aug. 28—Another 24 hours of sand have trickled through the hour glass. Another game has been lopped off the fast-dwindling 154 game schedule in the National League.

And today, even the gallant St. Louis Cardinals must fear that "they have so much to do, and so little time in which to do it."

The quotes are the appraisal of Billy Southworth former Card manager and present Brave leader. The sentiments are those of the nation's baseball fans, even the most rabid Redbird rooters.

Last night, the Cards tangled with the home-run blasting Giants very much aware that the league-leading Dodgers had lost a 6-to-3 ball game to their revitalized 'cousins', the Chicago Cubs.

Usually, a "break" like that signalized a spirited Cardinal triumph. But the night before, St. Louis had gone into a game knowing that they had a chance to snip a game from the Dodger bulge. And, the Cards had submitted, weakly to the Braves.

Once again the Cardinals flubbed an opportunity.

Ray Poat, a curve-balling rookie fresh from the last-place Baltimore Orioles in the International League, checked the hopeful world's champions with his eight-hit pitching and a triple and a home run. The Cards fell again, this time 6 to 4.

The Cardinals didn't lose ground despite the loss. But they still trail by six full games with 30 games to go.

* * *

BIG JOHN MIZE shared the hero role with Poat. The free-swinging slugger belted his 43rd homer to go four games ahead of Ruth's 60 homer record and also tie his own best mark set in 1940.

Aside from the twin losses to the chief National League contenders the big news was that Ewell Blackwell finally scored his 20th victory. The gaunt ace of the Cincinnati Reds became the first pitcher in the majors to achieve that mark by topping the Braves, 4 to 2, in 10 innings.

Dutch Leonard of the Phils used his knuckleball wizardry to baffle the Pirates last night, trimming the belting Bucs from Pittsburgh 4 to 3 to ring up his 16th success. He has failed only seven times.

In the American League, the pace-setting New York Yankees finally managed to win a one-run ball game by edging the Browns in the 10th 7 to 6. Snuffy Stirnweiss' second homer of the game was the clincher that gave Joe Page his 11th victory and stretched the Bomber lead to 12-½ games over the Boston Red Sox.

The Red Sox and the Tigers performed another "split". The Tigers took the first game, 7 to 2, with Stubby Overmire pitching six-hit ball. The Red Sox came right back to eke out a 5-to-4 win with Joe Dobson racking up win No. 14.

Bullet Bob Feller, author, businessman, and baseball player turned to his pitching talents and pitched the Indians to a 2-to-1 triumph over the Athletics for his 16th win of the year. All runs scored via the four base route.

Hank Majeski belted one for the A's, and Hank Edwards and Ken Keltner rapped a pair for the Ohio Injuns.

The Washington Senators belted across four runs in the first inning in their game against the Chicago White Sox and protected their margin for a 6-to-5 win. Relief pitcher Milo Candini was the winner. Thornton Lee took the loss.

Gelert, dog hero of ancient legend, belonged to Prince Llewellyn, son-in-law of King John of England. Returning one day from a hunt, Llewellyn found his child's cradle empty and the dog's mouth smeared with blood. He slew Gelert, but then saw the child unhurt and beside it the body of a wolf which Gelert had slain. Llewellyn in self-reproach, raised a monument over body of the faithful brute, and to this day the place is called Beth Gelert or Gelert's Grave.

HALLELULUAH WINS PACERS STAKE AT FAIR

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 28—Rodney, winner of the first heat in the $55,000 Hambletonian, was favored today to take the $1,500 governor's stake at the state fairgrounds track in Columbus.

Bi Shively, who drove the colt in the Goshen, N. Y., classic, was scheduled to pilot the three-year-old trotter today in the six-horse field. The race was the feature of the fourth day's four-event card.

Yesterday's main attraction, the Director of Agriculture Stake for three-year-old pacers, went to Hallelujah of the Parlay Acres Farm of Marion with Walter Dispanette driving. The chestnut filly placed second in the first heat and then went on to take the next two for the trophy.

The first serious accidents of the meet occurred in second and third heats of the pace. The adjuster, belonging to S. R. Lewis, Cleveland, and driven by Bob Plaxico, Canton, and General Stone, the Sam Wolfrom and William Bain Newark entry guided by Johnny Caton, Columbus, collided on the first turn in each heat.

Both horses and drivers were apparently uninjured, although Plaxico's sulkies were smashed. The drivers and the track judges agreed that the mishaps were unavoidable.

Song Girl, owned by Gay Acres Stable of Wooster with Caton driving, won her 18th race in 20 starts in the two-year-old trot. The brown filly won both heats from Moon Song, Ernie Smith's filly from Washington C. H.

The 2:20 trot went to Willglow, Jr., owned by Ed F. Jones, Jackson, and driven by Gabe Cartnal, Hanover, in straight heats, while Smith drove Charles Vallery's Waverly filly, Linda B to victory in the non-winners of $1,500 pace with a first, second and third.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION ENTERS HOMESTRETCH

The American Association pennant race entered the homestretch today. Kansas City sported a healthy nine-game lead over the Louisville Colonels following its 3-to-1 victory last night over Minneapolis.

The main interest in the remaining schedule, which ends Sept. 7, was a three-cornered fight among Minneapolis, Columbus and Indianapolis for fourth spot in the standings.

Minneapolis held a half-game advantage today over the other two teams after its loss to the Blues. Meanwhile, third-place Milwaukee's defeat of the Hoosiers, 6 to 0, dropped the Indiana team into a tie with Columbus, which was idle yesterday.

The other clubs were not scheduled as the eastern and western sections of the loop settled down in their own areas to finish out the season.

Sir Richard Arkwright (1732-92), was celebrated for his invention of cotton-spinning machinery. He was born in Preston, Lancashire, England, the youngest of 13 children and was bred to the trade of a barber.

BAN EFFECTIVE

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 28—Columbus' new 4 to 6 p. m., parking ban on downtown streets was termed 85 per cent effective by police today. No traffic tickets were issued to violators the first day the ordinance went into effect, but authorities warned they would be issued beginning next week. The ban is designed to expedite the flow of traffic during the going-home rush.

CARDS LOSE 6-4 TO HOME-RUN HITTING GIANTS

Big John Mize Belts 43rd Homer Of Season To Tie Own Mark Set In 1940

NEW YORK, Aug. 28—Another 24 hours of sand have trickled through the hour glass. Another game has been lopped off the fast-dwindling 154 game schedule in the National League.

And today, even the gallant St. Louis Cardinals must fear that "they have so much to do, and so little time in which to do it."

The quotes are the appraisal of Billy Southworth former Card manager and present Brave leader. The sentiments are those of the nation's baseball fans, even the most rabid Redbird rooters.

Last night, the Cards tangled with the home-run blasting Giants very much aware that the league-leading Dodgers had lost a 6-to-3 ball game to their revitalized 'cousins', the Chicago Cubs.

Usually, a "break" like that signalized a spirited Cardinal triumph. But the night before, St. Louis had gone into a game knowing that they had a chance to snip a game from the Dodger bulge. And, the Cards had submitted, weakly to the Braves.

Once again the Cardinals flubbed an opportunity.

Ray Poat, a curve-balling rookie fresh from the last-place Baltimore Orioles in the International League, checked the hopeful world's champions with his eight-hit pitching and a triple and a home run. The Cards fell again, this time 6 to 4.

The Cardinals didn't lose ground despite the loss. But they still trail by six full games with 30 games to go.

* * *

BIG JOHN MIZE shared the hero role with Poat. The free-swinging slugger belted his 43rd homer to go four games ahead of Ruth's 60 homer record and also tie his own best mark set in 1940.

Aside from the twin losses to the chief National League contenders the big news was that Ewell Blackwell finally scored his 20th victory. The gaunt ace of the Cincinnati Reds became the first pitcher in the majors to achieve that mark by topping the Braves, 4 to 2, in 10 innings.

Dutch Leonard of the Phils used his knuckleball wizardry to baffle the Pirates last night, trimming the belting Bucs from Pittsburgh 4 to 3 to ring up his 16th success. He has failed only seven times.

In the American League, the pace-setting New York Yankees finally managed to win a one-run ball game by edging the Browns in the 10th 7 to 6. Snuffy Stirnweiss' second homer of the game was the clincher that gave Joe Page his 11th victory and stretched the Bomber lead to 12-½ games over the Boston Red Sox.

The Red Sox and the Tigers performed another "split". The Tigers took the first game, 7 to 2, with Stubby Overmire pitching six-hit ball. The Red Sox came right back to eke out a 5-to-4 win with Joe Dobson racking up win No. 14.

Bullet Bob Feller, author, businessman, and baseball player turned to his pitching talents and pitched the Indians to a 2-to-1 triumph over the Athletics for his 16th win of the year. All runs scored via the four base route.

Hank Majeski belted one for the A's, and Hank Edwards and Ken Keltner rapped a pair for the Ohio Injuns.

The Washington Senators belted across four runs in the first inning in their game against the Chicago White Sox and protected their margin for a 6-to-5 win. Relief pitcher Milo Candini was the winner. Thornton Lee took the loss.

Gelert, dog hero of ancient legend, belonged to Prince Llewellyn, son-in-law of King John of England. Returning one day from a hunt, Llewellyn found his child's cradle empty and the dog's mouth smeared with blood. He slew Gelert, but then saw the child unhurt and beside it the body of a wolf which Gelert had slain. Llewellyn in self-reproach, raised a monument over body of the faithful brute, and to this day the place is called Beth Gelert or Gelert's Grave.

HALLELULUAH WINS PACERS STAKE AT FAIR

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 28—Rodney, winner of the first heat in the $55,000 Hambletonian, was favored today to take the $1,500 governor's stake at the state fairgrounds track in Columbus.

Bi Shively, who drove the colt in the Goshen, N. Y., classic, was scheduled to pilot the three-year-old trotter today in the six-horse field. The race was the feature of the fourth day's four-event card.

Yesterday's main attraction, the Director of Agriculture Stake for three-year-old pacers, went to Hallelulu ah of the Parlay Acres Farm of Marion with Walter Dispanette driving. The chestnut filly placed second in the first heat and then went on to take the next two for the trophy.

The first serious accidents of the meet occurred in second and third heats of the pace. The adjuster, belonging to S. R. Lewis, Cleveland, and driven by Bob Plaxico, Canton, and General Stone, the Sam Wolfrom and William Bain Newark entry guided by Johnny Caton, Columbus, collided on the first turn in each heat.

Both horses and drivers were apparently uninjured, although Plaxico's sulkies were smashed. The drivers and the track judges agreed that the mishaps were unavoidable.

Song Girl, owned by Gay Acres Stable of Wooster with Caton driving, won her 18th race in 20 starts in the two-year-old trot. The brown filly won both heats from Moon Song, Ernie Smith's filly from Washington C. H.

The 2:20 trot went to Willglow, Jr., owned by Ed F. Jones, Jackson, and driven by Gabe Cartnal, Hanover, in straight heats, while Smith drove Charles Vallery's Waverly filly, Linda B to victory in the non-winners of $1,500 pace with a first, second and third.

TODAY'S GARDEN-GRAPH

Head Off Tent Caterpillar Invasion

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Distributed by Central Press Association

YOU CAN save yourself a lot of March and April annoyance if you plan now to take some protective measures against the tent caterpillar.

If you have pet fruit trees in your home garden, all the more reason to be on the alert to eradicate tent caterpillars. They are especially fond of apple, cherry, peach and plum trees.

This fall and winter watch for egg masses of the tent caterpillar on twigs and branches of trees, or the trunks, as illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph. Each mass contains several hundred eggs. When discovered, the limbs bearing egg masses should be removed from the tree and burned.

In March and April the young tent caterpillars will begin to hatch unless the egg masses have been destroyed beforehand. Upon hatching, they make tentlike nests in tree crotches, as illustrated.

Watch for the nests, then rub tent and inhabitants from the tree with a rag which has been tied to a long stick or pole and dipped in kerosene.

During May, the full-grown caterpillars begin their descent of trees in which they have nested. At this time they are ravenously hungry. They feed on the young leaves and often defoliate a tree.

When the caterpillars reach the ground, they search for debris upon which they can fasten their yellowish white cocoons. Any such cocoons that are found should be destroyed by burning, otherwise moths will emerge from them in June and lay eggs which start another cycle in the life of these enemies of our trees.

NEWS Behind the NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

The truth behind all this is Britain's political crisis is worse than her economic crisis. Her Socialist politicians are trying to save their own skins with the British people by blaming us, rather than themselves for her condition. With an unbelievable propaganda campaign, they even succeeded in saving themselves from blame for their food shortage by convincing the British we were not giving them enough food. They did not let the public know their own Socialist experiments when land seizures had threatened private farmers and discouraged production. Now they are compromising slightly on their Socialist planning (delaying further steps for a while, they say) and are trying to dig themselves out by focusing accusations against their leading and only benefactor, the United States.

Washington will continue to watch this in hurt and unamused silence, believing absolutely nothing it hears from London while this drive is on, doing as much as possible to aid its advocates economically, while reserving a private prayer perhaps that the British public awakens. How long this will take can not be guessed as samples of British press reports lately indicate undeviatingly the Socialists are turning their press off and on like a faucet of the government.

Opinions expressed by the writer in the column are the views of the author and not necessarily those of the Circleville Herald

Head Off Tent Caterpillar Invasion

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Distributed by Central Press Association

YOU CAN save yourself a lot of March and April annoyance if you plan now to take some protective measures against the tent caterpillar.

If you have pet fruit trees in your home garden, all the more reason to be on the alert to eradicate tent caterpillars. They are especially fond of apple, cherry, peach and plum trees.

This fall and winter watch for egg masses of the tent caterpillar on twigs and branches of trees, or the trunks, as illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph. Each mass contains several hundred eggs. When discovered, the limbs bearing egg masses should be removed from the tree and burned.

In March and April the young tent caterpillars will begin to hatch unless the egg masses have been destroyed beforehand. Upon hatching, they make tentlike nests in tree crotches, as illustrated.

Watch for the nests, then rub tent and inhabitants from the tree with a rag which has been tied to a long stick or pole and dipped in kerosene.

During May, the full-grown caterpillars begin their descent of trees in which they have nested. At this time they are ravenously hungry. They feed on the young leaves and often defoliate a tree.

When the caterpillars reach the ground, they search for debris upon which they can fasten their yellowish white cocoons. Any such cocoons that are found should be destroyed by burning, otherwise moths will emerge from them in June and lay eggs which start another cycle in the life of these enemies of our trees.

NEWS Behind the NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

The truth behind all this is Britain's political crisis is worse than her economic crisis. Her Socialist politicians are trying to save their own skins with the British people by blaming us, rather than themselves for her condition. With an unbelievable propaganda campaign, they even succeeded in saving themselves from blame for their food shortage by convincing the British we were not giving them enough food. They did not let the public know their own Socialist experiments when land seizures had threatened private farmers and discouraged production. Now they are compromising slightly on their Socialist planning (delaying further steps for a while, they say) and are trying to dig themselves out by focusing accusations against their leading and only benefactor, the United States.

Washington will continue to watch this in hurt and unamused silence, believing absolutely nothing it hears from London while this drive is on, doing as much as possible to aid its accusers economically, while reserving a private prayer perhaps that the British public awakens. How long this will take can not be guessed as samples of British press reports lately indicate undeviatingly the Socialists are turning their press off and on like a faucet of the government.

Opinions expressed by the writer in the column are the views of the author and not necessarily those of the Circleville Herald

What A Line!

Lum and Abner, motion picture and radio team, say that next to running the Jot 'Em Down store, fishing is the most fun. Chet "Lum" Lauck and Norris "Abner" Goff slipped away from the broadcasting studio and their Pine Ridge emporium to try a hand at snaring a finny friend. The bass is proof that the boys had a good day's catch.

Two of Cole Porter's all time hits are in the musical spotlight Sunday, August 31 on "The Pause That Refreshes On the Air" at 6:30 p. m. EST. Ginny Simms sings the delightful "I Get A Kick Out of You" in the closing medley, which also includes "I've Got You Under My Skin" by the 45 music masters under Percy Faith's baton. Ginny's other numbers are the Harold Arlen success, "Stormy Weather" and "All My Love." The Faith ensemble goes tropical for their exciting arrangement of "Minute Samba" but gets back on home territory with Gershwin's beloved "Someone to Watch Over Me" and "Ivy," Hoagy Carmichael's latest entry in the melody sweepstakes.

Baritone Red Foley sings "This World Is Not My Home" and his composition, "Old Shep," and welcomes Cowboy Copas, harmonica player, and Barefoot Brownie, guitarist, as his guests when "Grand Ole Opry" airs Saturday, Aug. 30. Rod Brasfield, teller of tall tales, will offer a comedy monologue.

Bob Hawk, back on his Monday night CBS quiz after a refreshing vacation, comes through with a definition. "An office," says Hawk, "is where a man goes to relax from speeded-up home life."

The familiar chuckle of Throckmorton P. Gildersleeve, jolly water commissioner of the town of Summerfield, rides the airlanes again when Harold Peary resumes the role over NBC Wednesday, Sept. 10, at 8:30 p. m., EST after a summer vacation.

Lucille Ball, the popular screen star who will be the guest of ABC's "Betty Crocker Magazine of the Air" Monday, Sept. 1, began her career as a model for Hattie Carnegie. She had been told at dramatic school that she was wasting her time and had been fired from four chorus girl jobs when she began to model. Modeling for cigarette girl ads won the attention of Hollywood, where she has made more than 25 pictures.

Henry J. Taylor, currently in Germany and broadcasting his MBS series "Your Land and Mine" as he travels from one city to another, reports that the present heat wave in Europe is the most serious in 50 years. According to the ex-war correspondent, world traveler and economist, the long succession of rainless days has threatened water and milk supplies in a number of areas and an undernourished continent is apprehensively watching as the burning sun cuts sharply into the field of potatoes and late root crops.

Percy Faith will introduce, for the first time anywhere, the musical score of the new Rodgers and Hammerstein play "Allegro" on his program Sunday, September 7, 6:30. The musical is scheduled to open on Broadway some time in September, and the first performance of the music has been eagerly awaited by people in showbusiness as well as the general public.

"The Eleventh Hour," a strange tale of murder involving a shoes salesman and a banker's daughter, will be told on "The Whistler" Wednesday, Sept. 3. The story opens at a fashionable resort on the French Riviera where Alfred Treddle, an Englishman who sells shoes, is masquerading as a worldly figure and wins Cynthia Townsedn, a banker's daughter. After Treddle has wangled a fortune from his wife, he leaves her and returns to his London flat—and an unexpected murder.

"The Oath," an original script by Jan Kenworthy of Burbank, Calif., to be produced on the Wednesday, September 3, "Dr. Christian" program, is a radio first for its authoress. Miss Kenworthy is an art school graduate who has worked in the animation department of Walt Disney's Hollywood studios, and has published short stories and verses. Her script was a prize winner in the 1947 Dr. Christian awards.

Richard LeGrand, who portrays "Peavey" the druggist on NBC's "Summerfield Band Concert" and "The Great Gildersleeve," once went to a school of pharmacy, but gave it up for a career in radio.

Lum and Abner, motion picture and radio team, say that next to running the Jot 'Em Down store, fishing is the most fun. Chet "Lum" Lauck and Norris "Abner" Geff slipped away from the broadcasting studio and their Pine Ridge emporium to try a hand at snaring a finny friend. The bass is proof that the boys had a good day's catch.

Two of Cole Porter's all time hits are in the musical spotlight Sunday, August 31 on "The Pause That Refreshes On the Air" at 6:30 p. m. EST. Ginny Simms sings the delightful "I Get A Kick Out of You" in the closing medley, which also includes "I've Got You Under My Skin" by the 45 music masters under Percy Faith's baton. Ginny's other numbers are the Harold Arlen success, "Stormy Weather" and "All My Love." The Faith ensemble goes tropical for their exciting arrangement of "Minute Samba" but gets back on home territory with Gershwin's beloved "Someone to Watch Over Me" and "Ivy," Hoagy Carmichael's latest entry in the melody sweepstakes.

Baritone Red Foley sings "This World Is Not My Home" and his composition, "Old Shep," and welcomes Cowboy Copas, harmonica player, and Barefoot Brownie, guitarist, as his guests when "Grand Ole Opry" airs Saturday, Aug. 30. Rod Brasfield, teller of tall tales, will offer a comedy monologue.

Bob Hawk, back on his Monday night CBS quiz after a refreshing vacation, comes through with a definition. "An office," says Hawk, "is where a man goes to relax from speeded-up home life."

The familiar chuckle of Throckmorton P. Gildersleeve, jolly water commissioner of the town of Summerfield, rides the airlanes again when Harold Peary resumes the role over NBC Wednesday, Sept. 10, at 8:30 p. m., EST after a summer vacation.

Lucille Ball, the popular screen star who will be the guest of ABC's "Betty Crocker Magazine of the Air" Monday, Sept. 1, began her career as a model for Hattie Carnegie. She had been told at dramatic school that she was wasting her time and had been fired from four chorus girl jobs when she began to model. Modeling for cigarette girl ads won the attention of Hollywood, where she has made more than 25 pictures.

Henry J. Taylor, currently in Germany and broadcasting his MBS series "Your Land and Mine" as he travels from one city to another, reports that the present heat wave in Europe is the most serious in 50 years. According to the ex-war correspondent, world traveler and economist, the long succession of rainless days has threatened water and milk supplies in a number of areas and an underfed continent is apprehensively watching as the burning sun cuts sharply into the field of potatoes and late root crops.

Percy Faith will introduce, for the first time anywhere, the musical score of the new Rodgers and Hammerstein play "Allegro" on his program Sunday, September 7, 6:30. The musical is scheduled to open on Broadway some time in September, and the first performance of the music has been eagerly awaited by people in show-business as well as the general public.

"The Eleventh Hour," a strange tale of murder involving a shoes salesman and a banker's daughter, will be told on "The Whistler" Wednesday, Sept. 3. The story opens at a fashionable resort on the French Riviera where Alfred Treddle, an Englishman who sells shoes, is masquerading as a worldly figure and wins Cynthia Townsedn, a banker's daughter. After Treddle has wangled a fortune from his wife, he leaves her and returns to his London flat—and an unexpected murder.

"The Oath," an original script by Jan Kenworthy of Burbank, Calif., to be produced on the Wednesday, September 3, "Dr. Christian" program, is a radio first for its authoress. Miss Kenworthy is an art school graduate who has worked in the animation department of Walt Disney's Hollywood studios, and has published short stories and verses. Her script was a prize winner in the 1947 Dr. Christian awards.

Richard LeGrand, who portrays "Peavey" the druggist on NBC's "Summerfield Band Concert" and "The Great Gildersleeve," once went to a school of pharmacy, but gave it up for a career in radio.

RECRUIT OFFICE GETS NEW TITLE AFTER MERGER

United States army recruiting station, Circleville, has been officially redesignated as the United States Army and Air Force recruiting station, according to word received today by Sgt. Alva E. Smith from Col. John M. Ferguson, commanding officer of the Columbus recruiting district.

The new designation is in keeping with the unification of the armed forces through which the Army, Navy and the Air Force have been merged under a single cabinet head, the secretary of national defense.

Young men are showing special interest in the new Air Force career plan, Sergeant Smith said tmday. Through this plan a high school graduate may select the technical school he wishes to attend and know before enlistment whether he is acceptable for this special training. A full list of the Air Force courses is available at the recruiting station where assistance is being given in the preparation of applications for the training. The procedure is much like making application for college entrance, the sergeant explained.

In addition to the special Air Force technical school, enlistees may continue their education through the United States Armed Forces Institute while in service. Cost of the USAFI courses is nominal and many of them carry high school and college credits.

RECRUIT OFFICE GETS NEW TITLE AFTER MERGER

United States army recruiting station, Circleville, has been officially redesignated as the United States Army and Air Force recruiting station, according to word received today by Sgt. Alva E. Smith from Col. John M. Ferguson, commanding officer of the Columbus recruiting district.

The new designation is in keeping with the unification of the armed forces through which the Army, Navy and the Air Force have been merged under a single cabinet head, the secretary of national defense.

Young men are showing special interest in the new Air Force career plan, Sergeant Smith said tmday. Through this plan a high school graduate may select the technical school he wishes to attend and know before enlistment whether he is acceptable for this special training. A full list of the Air Force courses is available at the recruiting station where assistance is being given in the preparation of applications for the training. The procedure is much like making application for college entrance, the sergeant explained.

In addition to the special Air Force technical school, enlistees may continue their education through the United States Armed Forces Institute while in service. Cost of the USAFI courses is nominal and many of them carry high school and college credits.
